Soviets Top Arms Spending

WASHINGTON (WP) — The nations of the world spent nearly a quarter of a trillion dollars on defence in 1973, with the Soviet Union leading the list and spending an estimated 10 per cent more on armaments than the United States.

The statistics — covering 136 countries — were published in the seventh annual report of the State Department's Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. The agency issues the reports to help "in focusing attention on the problems and possibilities of reducing global military expenditures and limiting world-wide arms transfers," according to ACDA director Fred Nile.

Though the statistics are always about a year old, the agency's survey of 1973 spending calls attention to three important trends which clearly were accelerated in 1974.

The study notes that the international arms trade doubled in 1973 to $8.7 billion annually.

It was roughly $4.4 billion 10 years ago.

That trend increased in 1974 as U.S., French, British and Soviet arms continue to pour into the Middle East and Persian Gulf regions in unprecedented quantities.

The survey also notes that the appetite for weapons in the so-called developing countries is steadily growing.

The report indicates that the growth rate of both military expenditures and armed forces in these countries is now higher than the rate in developed nations.

Similarly, the share of gross national product in these developing nations is beginning to approach that of the developed countries, according to the State Department assessment.

If there is any hint of optimism about the statistics in the report, it is in the assessment that the overall growth rate of real world military expenditures "has apparently decelerated" somewhat.

CUPE Strike Slows City Down

Services normally provided to Victoria taxpayers were either eliminated or drastically cut back to a skeletal level today as a strike by the city's 280 outside employees — members of Local 50 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees — began at 7 a.m.

Picket lines outside City Hall were honored by members of CUPE Local 388, representing about 200 clerical, technical, engineering and inspection staff. That left only 35 non-union staff, including department heads and their assistants, to try to carry on the job of running the city's operations.

Immediate impact of the walk-out was felt by hundreds of commuting motorists, caught in a traffic snarl as they found their route barred by the Johnson Street Bridge left in the "up" position.

But probably the most widespread effect of the shutdown of many services will be the absence of garbage collection. There will be no pick-up service for households, and the city's contingency plans call on residents to do the job themselves by taking their garbage to a temporary depot at the heliport located off Esquimalt Road, overlooking the Inner Harbor.

The city has stockpiled 75,000 plastic garbage bags and these will be available free of charge at City Hall.

A major source of worry to the city administration is the possibility that fuel supplies may be cut off to the heating plant in City Hall, which also serves the McPherson Playhouse, the senior citizens' activity centre, the provincial courts — police station complex (including jail cells) and the stores on the opposite side of Centennial Square.

Only one filling outlet on Pandora serves the system, and CUPE spokesman Jim Walker indicated today that the installation will be picketed and he expects the suppliers, Chevron, to honor the pickets. Otherwise the company itself would be picketed, he added.

Usually there are two oil deliveries a week. An official said there is normally only enough fuel for about three days' use, but that could be stretched to a week if thermostats are turned down.

Walker said there was another fuel implication which could affect users of domestic gas. If a train hauling propane tanks to the Hydro-gas works crosses Johnson Street bridge, it will be declared hot, he said.

To help conserve supplies, a Silver Threads spokesman said the centre will close its afternoon sessions one hour earlier—at 3:30 p.m. instead of 4:30—and cancel all its evening programs until further notice.

A picket line went up on the Douglas Street end of city hall, along Pandora between Douglas and Government, and from Douglas to the west boundary of the police station along Fisgard.

The line extended across the front entrances of the police station and adjoining Provincial Court and was respected by inside staff workers. Police were given passes to go through the line.

Provincial court was adjourned from regular starting time at 10 a.m. to 11 while arrangements were made to have clerical work done outside the premises.

Parking commission staff respected the picket line on Fisgard, and according to a sign inside the entry to the parking building, motorists were to use a coin-operated meter.

City administrative staff had prepared a "notice to citizens of the city of Victoria," outlining the effects of the strike and measures to keep essential services going. It was hoped to give this notice immediate publicity by inserting it as a display advertisement in Victoria's two daily newspapers, but the city was told, "See STRIKE Page 2"

Remember Showdown in the NHL, "that between-periods promotion during last season's televised hockey games in which top scorers tried to beat the best goal-tenders? Well, it isn't dead after all.

Victoria Cougar owner-coach Pat Ginnell and Western Canada Hockey League president Ed Chynoweth have revived it and the deadline is 5 p.m. Tuesday. Ginnell has until then to pay a $1,000 fine for failing to control his team in games last week in Winnipeg and Brandon. Ginnell says he won't pay and Chynoweth says if he doesn't, he'll cancel Cougars' home game Tuesday night against Kamloops Chiefs. Page 10.

NEWS BRIEFS

DOG PACK MAULS GIRL

MISSION (CP) — A three-year-old girl is in satisfactory condition in hospital today after she was mauled by a pack of dogs near her home in this Fraser Valley community about 40 miles east of Vancouver.

Christal Rouse was found in a neighbor's yard by a passing motorist. Her clothes had been torn off and she suffered injuries to her head, legs and right arm.

Rail Strike Grows

Associated Press

A wildcat strike against the Burlington Northern Railroad spread to other lines throughout midwestern U.S. today despite a court order calling for an end to the walkout.

The railway also operates in B.C. and Winnipeg but there no pickets at Burlington's B.C. facilities at midnight and a Vancouver source said train movements were expected to be normal.

4 Held in Fire

MONTREAL (CP) — Four persons are being detained on a coroner's warrant for questioning in the deaths of 13 people at the Gargantua nightclub last week. Three of those detained, a man and two women, were arrested when police raided Richard Blass's hideout in Val David, 60 miles north of Montreal, killing Blass.

Civil War Feared

LISBON (UPI) — Foreign Minister Mario Soares said today provocative moves by the Communist party has opened the possibility of a civil war and foreign intervention in Portugal. Soares spoke after Communist mobs broke up a convention by the Social Democratic Centre party over the weekend and brought expressions of fear from socialists of the growing power of Portugal's far left Communist party.

OPEC Pact Reached

Times News Services/ALGIERS — The world's major oil exporting countries are framing a proposal from Algeria which they hope will stabilize the world economy during the next five years.

Their plan, details of which have yet to be worked out, is to freeze oil prices in real terms by pegging them to an index of world inflation.

The proposal won widespread support at the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries Conference which ended here Sunday, sources said.

The OPEC nations also agreed Sunday to participate in an international conference on world economic problems, which they said present "A growing threat to world peace and stability."

The ministers of foreign affairs, petroleum and finance of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries specified in a communique, however, that such conference would have to discuss all "problems of raw materials and development."

The agreement sets the stage for a possible confrontation between the West and the Third World with its rejection of a U.S. call to limit the talks to the producing nations and the industrial powers.

The OPEC states said the world economic crisis "constitutes a growing threat to world peace and stability."

But the communique condemned "the propaganda campaign placing on OPEC's member countries the responsibility for this crisis as well as threats directed at these countries which create confusion and lead to confrontation."

The communique said the chiefs of state of the 13 OPEC nations will hold their first summit meeting between Feb. 21 and March 8 in Algiers to thrash out their position.

Reports from Paris said a preliminary world conference might be held in late March to draw up the agenda for full session expected in June or July.

NEW QUAKE FAULT IN CALIFORNIA

BRAWLEY, Calif. (UPI) — A new earthquake fault stretching for seven miles between here and the community of Westmoreland, just above the U.S.-Mexico border, may be the cause of some 40 or more tremors that shook the Imperial Valley this weekend.

Approximately 35 tremors rattled residents since Thursday, some measuring as high as 4.7 on the Richter scale. They were followed by 13 more within a 12-hour period after midnight Saturday.

One of the tremors was so strong that it shattered most of the windows in the downtown area, a police dispatcher said.

Brawley officials have placed 100 city employees on standby and have established a communication system in case a major quake hits the area.

At least 26 quakes rocked the Southern California area during the past two weeks before the series of tremors hit Brawley.

Ottawa Revamps Pacific Rim Plan

The federal government has revamped its plans for the Pacific Rim National Park on the west coast of Vancouver Island, and intends to take in other tracts of land in order to preserve the coastline, including the 55-mile life-saving trail between Bamfield and Port Renfrew.

The seashore strip will vary from one half to one-and-a-half miles in width and includes several rivers important to fisheries.

In 1970 the province agreed to include the wilderness coast in the federal park but definition of boundaries was delayed to remove the land from the jurisdiction of the B.C. Forest Service.

Included in the area are the Tsusiat, Hobbitan and Squasquam lakes — the last unlogged low-level lakes on the southern half of Vancouver Island.

19 Hurt By IRA Blasts

BELFAST (UPI) — The Irish Republican Army bombed stores and cafes in Britain and Northern Ireland today in a blitz that wounded at least 19 persons and caused heavy damage.

Eighteen persons were hurt in the British city of Manchester, where a bomb shattered the basement of one of the city's leading department stores. One person was injured in Londonderry, where three bombs exploded in quick succession.

Police in both cities ordered the evacuation of other downtown stores and began searching for more explosives.

There were no injuries in an explosion which later rocked the centre of London at the southern end of Bond Street.

Stock Markets Jumping Despite Gloomy News

Times News Services

Stock market prices in London and New York surged ahead today despite the release of two reports in Washington that showed the U.S. had accumulated its largest trade deficit of this century and that productivity had dropped for the first time in the nation's history.

In London, the stock market boom which began last week turned into a wild buying spree today, with The Financial Times index putting on 22.1 points in the first hour of trading.

The rise to 239.1 was the biggest ever recorded in such a short time.

By noon, the index had slipped to 229.8.

On Friday, a record 10 per cent was added to the share index which put on 19.9 points in the day.

Today's increases added about $5.1 billion to total share values, on top of about $4.6 billion Friday.

"It's a wild scramble again," said one broker. "Friday was quiet compared to this."

Second Drug 'Rip-Off' Death

VANCOUVER (CP) — Linda Jensen, 21, found murdered Saturday south of Squamish, was the girlfriend of a man shot to death in Stanley Park last Tuesday and probably was killed the same day, police say.

Miss Jensen, a known heroin addict and prostitute, had her head bashed in with a 25-pound rock on a snow-covered road three miles east of Britannia Beach, police said.

Her killing, and that of Philip Zinchuk, 23, with whom she had been living, were described by police as "drug-oriented" and part of a "rip-off war" amongst members of Vancouver's drug-addict population.

The local situation is so bad, police said Sunday, many addicts are living in terror and are afraid to tell anyone what is going on. They said strong-arm edicts are holding up weaker addicts for their drug supplies.

"But nobody had to be berated in my case," Hodder said. "Everyone co-operated wonderfully."

Using a bank loan — for which he pledged faith as collateral — Hodder had given $5 to each of 600 members of the congregation.

Women used the money to buy baking ingredients, then sold homemade cookies door-to-door. Other members gave gourmet dinner, parties, organized rallies or did handyman chores.

A doctor sold an oil painting. A private pilot took friends on sightseeing tours over Toronto, charging them a nominal fee for the flight.

Now the church will hold its annual meeting next week to decide what to do with the $9,000 profit after Hodder repays the $3,000 loan.

"Just think how my credit rating is going to shoot up when I pay the bank back so promptly," Hodder said. "It's a scheme many other churches could well copy."

completely overwhelmed. I thought we might get a few hundred dollars more but never anything like this.

"My investment in dollars was returned four times over — but my investment in faith was increased a thousand-fold."

Hodder based his scheme on a Biblical parable in which a property owner distributed goods to his servants to invest in his absence, then returned to berate a man who let the money sit idle.

He Reaped What He Sowed—Fourfold

TORONTO (UPI) — When Rev. Ben Hodder handed out $3,000 to his congregation to invest for the church for 60 days, he wasn't expecting a minor bonanza.

But he got it. Members returned Sunday and quietly placed nearly $12,000 in a basket at the foot of a cross near the altar.

"It's just fantastic," Hodder, 37, of Key Beach United Church, said today. "I'm

Strike Stymies City

that ad scheduling precludes publication until Wednesday. The notice says that due to the "regrettable" strike of outside employees "a number of public services will have to be curtailed," but "skeleton services will continue to be provided by management personnel to the extent that limited numbers allow."

Information contained in the two-page notice and statements by senior city officials today give this broad picture of the strike's effect, and the attempts to fill the gap:

City Hall — Open only four hours daily for the duration of the strike, from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. and from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m., with the telephone switchboard (385-5711) open to handle "emergency" enquiries.

Fire and police services — Expected not to be affected "substantially" by the strike, and will continue to provide usual protective services.

Garbage — Collection discontinued and the city garbage wharf closed. Garbage in plastic bags may be dumped at the Esquimalt Road heliport which will be open seven days a week from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Householders are urged to process garbage as much as possible — flatten tins, burn or store paper, use vegetable waste for compost — and to help with disposal for neighbors who are ill, elderly or do not drive.

Downtown parkades — Open as usual but on a prepayment basis, with customers asked to obtain tickets from dispensing machines before parking. Elevators will not be in operation.

Johnson Street bridge — Will remain open to vehicular traffic but will be raised for marine traffic between 9:30 a.m. and 10:30 a.m., and 6 p.m. and 7 p.m. daily. Normally the bridge is lifted for tugs and other marine traffic about a dozen times a day.

Engineering services — None available except for "certain emergency work to water and sewer services," says the notice. City engineer John Sanson said his team of six senior engineers should be able to cope with most water leaks and other emergencies that crop up "except if there's anything disastrous."

All major road projects either in progress when the strike started or planned to start, including the Blanchard hill realignment, the Finlayson widening and the Government Street Mall, suspended.

Streets and sidewalks — No cleaning possible. Property owners asked to keep their frontages clear of paper and litter.

Snow — Hope it doesn't, seems to be the message, because it can't be removed from streets and, similarly, no sanding vehicles will be out in icy weather.

Traffic regulation — The city hopes traffic signals will continue to operate normally but if there's any damage — for instance, from vehicle colliding with a signal post — they won't be repaired. Portable stop signs will be used instead.

Sports and entertainment — Royal Athletic Park and the Crystal Pool will be closed while the labor dispute continues. The Memorial Arena will remain open for hockey, concerts and other events but probably not for public skating. The McPherson Playhouse will also open as usual.

Parks — Will remain open although all park buildings including washrooms will be closed to the public. Ross Bay Cemetery will be closed for burials.

Payment of bills and taxes — Wherever possible, city comptroller Mason Sheldrick asks residents to pay by mail. But he together with a handful of staff will be on hand during opening hours to try to cope with all the other routine services to the public — including issuing dog tags, business licences and commercial vehicle plates.

Building permits — Remaining staff in City Hall will try to continue processing these but probably without the elaborate system of pre-permit checks, and by exercising a certain amount of discretion. For example, if a contractor applies for a permit for a fairly routine home alteration or addition, and he is known as a reliable type, the permit will be issued subject to inspection when the dispute ends and inspectors are back on the job.

Oil, Gas Exploration $425,000

Oil and gas exploration rights for 3,557 acres of land in B.C. have added some $425,000 to provincial revenues, Mines Minister Leo Nimsick says.

Bonus bids on 17 of the total 41 lease parcels offered paid $425,040.27.

An additional $21,014 was received by the provincial mines and petroleum resources department for statutory fees and rents.

No acceptable bids were received on four permit parcels and one drilling reservation offered.

Highest price per acre was $147.87 paid by Wainco Oil Ltd., and Czar Resources Ltd., for a lease 40 miles northwest of Fort St. John.

A department official said the disposition was an extra one scheduled as an experiment to assist companies in the utilization of their drilling rigs.

He said companies would be able to spread their posting and drilling activities over a more flexible period of time than is usually the case in the winter season.

The regular quarterly competition will be held Feb. 26, with a closing date for postings Feb. 4.

Canadian Boat Held In Tuna War

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador (AP) — The Tuna War over fishing rights and territorial waters flared again during the weekend when one Canadian and four U.S. tuna boats were seized by Ecuador navy-patrols, the government announced.

The seizures Saturday were the first since 1973. A government spokesman said the Canadian boat is the Atlantic Gardner.

Ecuador and several other Latin American countries claim a 200-mile offshore limit for fishing. The U.S. recognizes a 12-mile limit.

The navy said the boats were taken to Salinas, a Pacific port 75 miles west of here.

SCHMOCKEY STILL ON

Organizers of the fifth annual Kinsmen Schmockey night said today the strike by city outside workers is not expected to affect the benefit show at 7:30 tonight in Memorial Arena.

"We mean everything ourselves," said Kinsmen spokesman Cliff Clark.

200 Top Cats Compete

Vancouver Island's biggest cat show ever saw over 200 of North America's best gathered at Sanscha Hall Saturday and Sunday.

Local entries numbered about 20 in the fifth annual international show of the Island Cat Fanciers.

Highest number of top awards went to a short-haired Abyssinian called Nile's Scarlet O'Hara, shown by Maureen Nottingham of Sunland, Calif.

Nottingham's kitten received four best cat awards in the All-American scoring system.

Victoria residents Mary and John Van de Reep, 1064 Mari-gold Rd., took home one best cat award for their well-bred Persian long-hair.

Judges were from B.C., Oregon and California.

Measuring entrants against show standards, they judged in four separate rings during the two-day affair.

Standards set down ideal head and body shape, weight, coat texture and length for which breeders strive.

Long-hairs and short-hairs were judged separately for most awards. Breed prizes included those for Himalayans, Persians, Siamese, Turkish Angora, British Shorthair and Manx.

Final awards were given in such categories as Best Household Pet, Best Long-hair, Best Neuter and Best Spay.

soared and more than 15.2 million shares were traded.

The volume of 9.3 million in the first hour was the highest ever.

Continuing a trend begun Friday, several major banks dropped their interest rate for prime business loans to 9 1/2 per cent from 9 3/4 per cent.

The U.S. trade deficit of $3 billion was caused by a triple bill for imported oil bill, even though there was a 5 per cent cut in the amount of oil imported.

In a separate report, the bureau of labor statistics said non-farm productivity fell 5.1 per cent in October. November and December for the seventh consecutive quarter. It is the longest slide in productivity since such records were begun in 1947.

For the year, productivity declined 2.7 per cent, the first annual drop since the government started keeping records.

Despite the large trade deficit and lower productivity, Wall Street saw encouraging economic developments in lower prime interest rates and a favorable court ruling for IBM in an anti-trust suit.

the weather

Temperatures were once again near zero over portions of the interior this morning. An area of cloud and some snowflurries was moving into the north coast. A disturbance moving towards the coast will carry the weather south and easy today and tonight. Skies will clear again in most regions tonight behind the system.

Sadat Shopping For French Aid

THE HIGH SIGN from construction worker Harvey Winters is exactly that. Winters currently is working on the structural supports for the Bank of Montreal building in Toronto. Already it is higher than any other building in Toronto and when completed, it will be 72 storeys high.

Times News Services

Egyptian president Anwar Sadat flew to Paris today to shop for economic, technical, and military aid to beef up his armies facing Israel.

Israeli defence minister Shimon Peres accused Egypt of building up its forces in the Suez Canal region, possibly to influence negotiations on a second-stage military disengagement accord in the Sinai.

Sadat's visit to France is the first one made by an Egyptian president.

Diplomatic sources in Cairo said the Egyptian leader wanted France to take an active role in arranging a Middle East peace settlement in addition to providing military, technical, and financial aid.

Sadat has been forced to shop for alternative arms sources after the Soviet Union refused to resupply Egypt with modern weapons following the 1973 Middle East war.

The Egyptian president said last week he still trusts U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger, but Kissinger's peace-making efforts must be speeded up.

Sadat's visit to France is part of an effort to show the superpowers he has alternatives to reliance on either of them, Arab sources said.

"By repeating that the Russians have not given Egypt arms, he puts the onus on the Kremlin if anything happens," one French source said.

"And by trying to buy arms here, he is telling Moscow it had better hurry in satisfying his demands."

The Egyptians think Kissinger will put more pressure on Israel to make concessions if he feels that France and perhaps other European countries are likely to get into the peace-making act, the source added.

Fishermen Rescued

The coast guard cutter Racer rescued a Vancouver man and his son Saturday night near Trial Island after their 24-foot pleasure craft broke down.

The two had left Cadboro Bay on a fishing trip at noon and were reported missing at 8 p.m.

The Racer came from Active Pass, arriving at 10 p.m. She spotted the pleasure boat and the occupants at 11:45 p.m., 1 1/2 miles south of Trial Island.

The pleasure craft was taken under tow, arriving at Cadboro Bay at 12:30 a.m.

Nixon, JFK Sex Rumors Filed

Times News Services NEW YORK — Rumors about the sex lives of John F. Kennedy and Richard Nixon were included in files the FBI kept on public officials when the agency was headed by the late J. Edgar Hoover, Time magazine reported today.

The magazine said the reports suggested that Kennedy, as well as his brother, the late Senator Robert Kennedy, were having extramarital affairs.

In the case of Nixon, the rumor was that he had a liaison with a Chinese woman in Hong Kong before becoming president.

The material, said Time,

"was as sensational as it was spurious," adding that Hoover kept the files in his private office and sometimes regaled high government officials with tidbits of information.

Meanwhile, the Washington Post says the FBI installed bugs and wiretaps in the hotel suite of Dr. Martin Luther King during the 1964 Democratic National Convention and reported to former president Lyndon Johnson on the activities of then attorney-general Robert Kennedy.

The newspaper says its story Sunday was based on a Senate Watergate Committee memo summarizing a 1973 interview with Leo Clark, who in 1964 was in charge of the FBI's office at Atlantic City, N.J., where the convention was held.

The Post says Clark, now retired from the FBI, said that electronic and physical surveillance was carried out by a special FBI team on orders from the Johnson White House.

Most of the information obtained was transmitted to Johnson over a telephone line specially installed to bypass the White House switchboard, the Post account quotes Clark as saying.

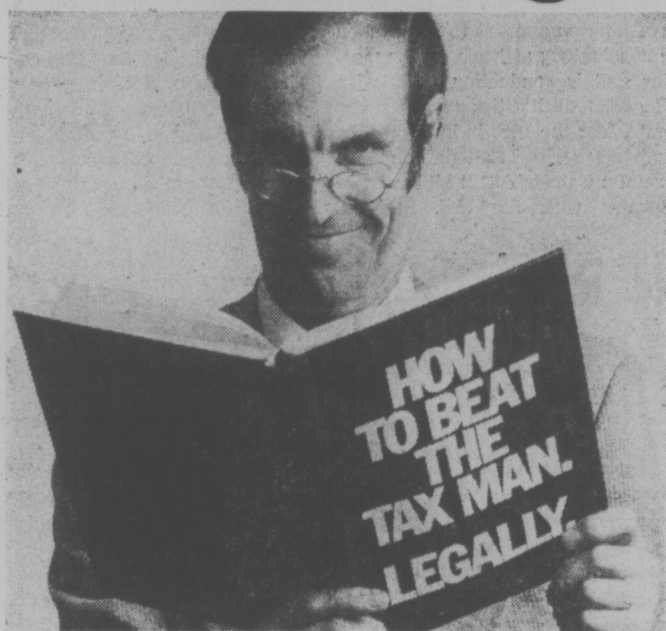

Clark is quoted as saying the information included Ken-edy's activities, identities of senators and congressmen visiting King's hotel suite, identities of persons seeking support of civil rights leaders, plans of delegates or delegations and speculation on vice-presidential nominees.

The Post says that although Johnson was assured of the nomination for his first full term as president, he was worried about a possible movement to draft Kennedy as his running mate.

He also was concerned about a challenge by a primarily black delegation to the white delegation from Mississippi, the Post says.

Now you don't have to be rich to have a tax dodge.

This tax dodge is for the average working person, and it's perfectly legal.

Because the Government wants you to save for retirement, they are prepared to give you a legal tax dodge. The amount of tax money you can save is very worthwhile. For example, if you're married with two dependent children, and earned $12,000 last year, your tax saving could amount to over $700.

Here's what the Government says you can do.

Within specified limits you can deposit part of your earned income each year, in a Canada Trust Retirement Savings Plan and deduct an equal amount from your taxable income. Less taxable income — less tax for the Tax Man. It's that simple. (And if both husband and wife work, both can set up a Plan.) Even if you're already in a pension plan at work, you can still take advantage of this tax saving.

Because of rising inflation, a company pension may not be enough to guarantee you a comfortable retirement on its own. Here's an opportunity for you to have more money when you retire, and save on your income tax while you're at it.

If you're short of cash you can still get in.

We can loan you the money to start a Plan. In most cases, right on the spot, and with no red tape. We call it our "Instant Retirement Savings Loan". And get this tax dodge! The interest on the loan is also tax deductible.

Your money isn't locked in forever.

With a Canada Trust Retirement Savings Plan there is no obligation to make future deposits and no sales commission to pay. Should you decide to forget the whole thing, you can get your money out. (But if you do, you'll have to pay the appropriate income tax.)

March 1st is the deadline. If you decide you want to save on your 1974 taxes, better do it by March 1st. That's the deadline the Government has set. Nobody, not even the rich, can use this tax dodge after that.

Tough Cs Pay Stand

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will have to take a tougher stand on civil service pay raise demands in 1975 because it cannot afford high percentage increases, says Treasury Board President Jean Chretien.

Speaking on the CTV television network program Question Period, Chretien said civil servant salaries have over the last six or seven years — always been far ahead of inflation.

Chretien agreed with panel members that the public service and the federal government seemed to be in an adversarial situation all the time over salary demands.

He agreed also that the constant confrontation between his office and the over 4,000 people who work for him probably presents a bewildering situation to the ordinary citizen. It does not appear like the ordinary collective bargaining situation.

The treasury board president criticized the Canadian Union of Public Employees for taking advantage of the collective bargaining situation but said that if they choose to go to arbitration, it is the arbitrator, not the government, that should receive the blame.

The union takes advantage of the situation every time it chooses to place only a fraction of workers on strike while the entire number reaps the benefits of a settlement, he said.

Win one of four Ford Maverick Grabbers.

For an opportunity to win, all you have to do is deposit $250 or more in a Canada Trust Retirement Savings Plan by the March 1st deadline.

Tougher Line in Ottawa

The co-operative, and it must be said, subservient, relationship which Canada has practised with the United States since before the onset of World War II appears to be on a long downhill run. Divergent economic priorities between our two countries plus recent Canadian nationalism have combined to produce a wary attitude on both sides of the 49th parallel. None of the current frictions are new in a general historical sense. Trade, lack of support for U.S. international policies, and even cultural differences have produced minor squabbles from time to time. What is new is a harder line from Ottawa, in dealing with Washington, and even more surprising an apparent — at least on the surface — American acquiescence in Canada's national dreams.

Since the diplomatic pouches which flow back and forth between Ottawa and Washington almost on a daily basis rarely make headlines, and with only press conferences and communiques to rely on from the Ford-Trudeau meeting, it is difficult to know if the change is real or apparent. But a few things stand out. After years of intransigence the U.S. appears to have raised no objections about Canada ending tax privileges for U.S. magazines operating in Canada — the Canadian proposal was a topic of discussion when U.S. President Ford and Prime Minister Trudeau met in Washington recently. Last month Canada announced it would end oil exports to the U.S. — nearly one million barrels per day — by 1982, and the Ford administration reacted with what amounted to a shrug. While the U.S. state department said it regretted Canada's decision it understood our position. A bland reaction from a country that was seriously considering gasoline rationing.

Now Canada has proposed legislation that could end the situation whereby an American law — the Trading with the Enemy Act — can interfere with exports from Canada by U.S. subsidiaries. Again Washington appears to have taken a conciliatory attitude on the matter and is conducting talks with Canadian authorities about the dispute. Yet the U.S. is known to be unhappy with Canada on two counts: Canada's $1.2 billion trade surplus with the U.S. in 1973 which the Americans view as largely the result of inequalities in the Canadian-U.S. Auto Pact, and something they would like to redress at a time of deficit spending. Nor do the Americans like our attitude to national defence. Last year Canada spent only 2.1 per cent of its gross national product on the armed forces — the lowest percentage of any North Atlantic Treaty Organization country except Luxembourg.

Considering the bearish aura emanating from Ottawa in its relations with the U.S. of late, it is only natural that Washington is going to demand some trade-offs in return for its "understanding" on energy and recognition of Canadian nationalism. There is no question that the new emerging relationship of equals — if that is what it is — pleases most Canadians who have always been a little envious, as well as afraid of the behemoth next door. Geography, size and cultural ties dictate that Canada and the U.S. should always be good friends. But Ottawa's new-found moxie is heartening after years of inertia, as long as there is no small print in those diplomatic pouches, which the public hasn't seen yet.

UVic Pays the Piper

An old saw says the sins of the father should not be visited on the son but that appears to be exactly what has happened as the University of Victoria prepares to pay $12,400 to the Canadian Association of University Teachers so the association will lift its motion of censure, imposed four years ago when Bruce Partridge was president. Besides the implication that UVic is buying off CAUT, the payment is wrong on another point: the current administration should not have to pay for the unproved sins or omissions of a predecessor.

It is laughable for Board of Governors Chairman S. J. Cunliffe to say the action is being taken simply to settle the dispute and in no way acknowledges fault. That is like Richard Nixon saying he will accept a pardon but is in no way guilty of anything connected with Watergate. It also demeans CAUT — a reputable principled organization — to take this money, even if it will go towards helping individuals whose academic careers may have been damaged by a previous administration. If CAUT feels censure against UVic should be lifted because of a new atmosphere at the university, well and good. But demanding a payment as well from a new administration brings to mind some strong unpleasant words. By going along with the payment, UVic's board of governors negates its previous stance — it's an absolute reversal — and looks as insipid and vacillating as it did during the original tenure disputes.

20th Century Not So Terrible

WASHINGTON—These are hard days for prophets, but despite the price of gas and other nuisances, the world is moving into the last quarter of the twentieth century anyway. Whether you regard 1975 as the last year of the third quarter or the first year of the last quarter, the temptation to look to the future is irresistible, if only to get some perspective on the gloomy present.

One consoling thought is that most of the prophets were wrong about the first three quarters. They were optimistic at the turn of the century, but the first quarter produced the First World War, mortally wounded the old empires, and spawned the Soviet revolution.

They were optimistic again in 1925, but the second quarter brought on the "great economic depression, the Second World War, the final collapse of the major empires, and the spread of Communism through eastern Europe and across China.

Then the pessimists took over with their apocalyptic visions of new and more horrible nuclear wars, but in spite of the conflicts in Korea, southeast Asia, and the Middle East, the third quarter has been, as The Economist of London observed, "by far the most successful in history."

Disaster Unlikely

"During these past 25 years," it remarked, "the real gross world product has more than trebled, so that we have added more in these years than in all previous aeons of our planet. Better, the growth has gone to many of the right places. In 1950, the average life expectancy of an Indian was probably in the 30s, and it is now believed to be in the 50s. There has been a world-wide surge in education and in literacy. In all continents other than Asia and Africa, it is now unlikely that a mad dictator will start a war."

This is not to minimize the complicated, distracting and dangerous problems that trouble thoughtful men and women at the opening of the last quarter, but despite the alarming growth of the human race, the shortages of food and fuel and the general derangement of world politics, economics and finances, it is hard to believe that the world is likely to see in these next 25 years anything like the upheavals and disasters of the previous 75.

The things that agitate the United States at present—unemployment, high prices, fuel shortages, inflation, the inequality of women, feeble leadership and a general distrust of its institutions—are all correctable. None of them is beyond the power, resources, and imagination of the nation.

The essential reforms have already begun. This city is a much healthier place than it was a year ago. It has shed many of its illusions about heroic men, limitless resources of food and fossil fuel. It is beginning to explore the possibilities and shortcomings of the earth as if explored the mysteries of outer space.

All this will take time and force us to do hard things with our minds and reactive and better system. If we miss the opportunity, I think there is going to be chaos."

Well, the opportunity was missed in the 50 years and chaos was the result, and it could happen again. We could fall apart over the economy of the nation, as we did in the early 1930s. The future leadership and direction of the Soviet Union and China, and the struggles of the Middle East are beyond our control, but the nations with the greatest capacity to wage war are precisely the nations that stand to lose the most by waging war, so there are rational grounds for hope and change.

Senator Scoop Jackson of Washington state, of course, tells us that we can be tougher with the Soviet Union, interfere in Moscow's internal affairs, and force the Soviets to make concessions on the control of nuclear arms. In the worst job of the year, which wasn't even original, he also compared President Gerald Ford to a man rearranging the deck chairs on the Titanic.

Can't Be All Bad

All this has irritated the Russians, who have called back their ambassador from Washington to re-appraise U.S.-Soviet relations, but there is nothing in the constitution that says we have to endure another age of Jackson, and nothing in the record to suggest that the Soviets will abandon the policy of détente because of a few silly remarks by a United States senator.

The trade and finances of the world are obviously in a mess. Europe and Japan are temporarily at the mercy of the oil-producing states. Crude oil has more than quadrupled in price, and this is a disaster for the poorest of the countries, but oil even now costs only about 2 per cent of the world gross product, and while a vast redistribution of wealth is going on in the world, even this disruption can be managed and absorbed and finally removed in time by new sources of fuel.

The need for emergency measures to deal with the worst drop in the nation's output in sixteen years is obvious. The president has got out his slump pump, and the Democrats are fussing with him, and with themselves, as usual, but the prospects for the rest of the century scarcely justify the popular predictions of disaster. Even the congress of the United States is changing, and if that can happen, everything can't be all bad.

HENRY KISSINGER
... real chance of peace

sources, but there are solid reasons for believing that we will have time in this last quarter to work out remedies if not solutions without the distraction of another world war.

"I believe," Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said the other day, "that with all the dislocations we are now experiencing, there also exists an extraordinary opportunity to form for the first time in history a truly global society, carried by the principle of interdependence."

"And if we act wisely and with vision, we can look back to all this turmoil as the birth pangs of a more cre-

Symphony Board

Re the editorial of Jan. 21—Symphony's Future in Balance. So two directors resigned and no one asked them why. Why should anyone ask them? When one resigns from any position one states the reason if one wishes it known to others or one keeps one's reasons to oneself—no questions asked, please. If the one resigning does not give a reason it would be the height of presumptuousness to ask why. Apparently the present symphony board members retain some good manners.

Lazlo Gati may have brought the orchestra to its present peak, but do not forget that some members have been with it for almost 30 years. Without Gati they could not help but have improved with that many years practice. Had they not they would have been dismissed long ago.

Since the resigning members and 50 others who have signed a petition for an emergency general meeting are apparently in favor of "the talented musical director" being given a free hand regarding expenses, my suggestion would be that those people pay each season any shortage of funds as a result of over-spending. Also I suggest they pay the full cost of such a meeting—mailing, advertising, hall rent, etc.

It would be interesting to know just how long the dissident resigned-board members have been in Victoria. I heard Gati and a fairly new member of the orchestra make outrageous statements at an annual meeting about the support the symphony got from the community. I took it that the board was accustomed to his emotional statements and allowed him to "let off steam," especially as no one corrected him.

Am I correct in thinking that one or more of the resigning board members have "an inside track" to the editor of the Times? The tone of the editorial would lead me to think that they have.

Why should one "heave a sigh of gratitude" for the continued playing of the orchestra? They are paid, and paid well and are only doing something that many others do for nothing—entertain an audience. They are extremely lucky that Victoria tries to keep the symphony operating. All earn their living elsewhere (even Gati has many other ways of augmenting his income) and would not be playing unless they really wished to do so. Personally I would like more orchestra and fewer guest artists. Also fewer concerts. A season ticket now means 12 concerts. Ten in a season is enough, eight would be better. The celebrity series at the McPherson Playhouse was dropped through lack of support. That should indicate to Gati that many symphony supporters do not favor his ego-building hirings of well-known musicians. —Mrs. C. C. Goater, 1960 Taylor Street.

Reconcile Differences

Having been an active player in the Victoria symphony orchestra since its inception over 33 years ago and recently retired, I must express my opinion against the unfortunate, destructive publicity that has appeared in the news media regarding dissension between some members of the symphony board and the musical director.

We have in our orchestra today musicians of the highest calibre, led by a talented conductor who has been largely responsible for moulding the orchestra into its present high degree of excellence.

Now a few individuals of the symphony society seem to be bent on destroying what has taken over 30 years to create. Perhaps this group has forgotten one of their main functions is to raise funds to support the orchestra. In this their efforts have been less than adequate. Unfortunately, we are not in the unique position, as great orchestras in Europe, of being state-financed in entirety.

One wonders why the Halifax symphony orchestra received a Canada Council grant of $240,000 and the Victoria symphony orchestra only $40,000.

Was proper representation made to the Canada Council on behalf of the Victoria symphony orchestra by the persons responsible?

Some of the world's greatest artists have performed with our orchestra. It is iniquitous to imagine music lovers of greater Victoria being deprived the opportunity of hearing future greats perform with the orchestra as a result of puerile behaviour of a few individuals.

The Victoria symphony orchestra is an important part of our culture in Victoria. I sincerely trust the society members will be able to reconcile their differences in a mature and democratic manner. —Mrs. Ellen Campbell, 1595 Rockland Avenue.

Orchestra Replies

Out of a serious concern for the future of cultural life in Victoria, we wish to draw attention to what we feel to be certain of its present advantages.

In its symphony orchestra, Victoria has an ensemble of experienced professional musicians of demonstrated abilities. All of the principal players have been members in professional orchestras elsewhere in the world. The Victoria symphony in its present form is the result of the quality and experience both of its musicians and of its musical director, Lazlo Gati. Its excellence has been attested by continuing strong audience attendance, but overwhelming complementary response by guest conductors and visiting soloists, and by the testimony of musicians like Murray Adaskin who has called the orchestra "the greatest cultural bargain in Canada."

From our point of view, the reasons for the orchestra's present excellence are fourfold:

● There are opportunities in this area which permit professional musicians to live here while earning from the orchestra only one-eighth to one-twelfth the salary they would command in orchestras elsewhere. The symphony represents one strand of a delicate financial fabric that makes it possible for these musicians to stay in Victoria, the others being the University of Victoria, the Victoria Conservatory, and private teaching. If one strand of this fabric is broken, many of our best musicians may be forced to leave Victoria.

● This diversity of occupation is very attractive to musicians and healthy not only for their own musical development, but for the development of the musical organizations concerned, because it permits a balanced musical life of performing and teaching. It has further advantages for the community at large in that musicians from the symphony are found performing in organizations like the Trio Victoria, Quartet Amabile, Pacific Wind Quintet, the Western Brass, Victoria Operatic Society, Victoria Choral Society, Amity Singers, Ars Nova and many more.

● Four years ago the orchestra was limited in what it could play. Because of the constant challenge of more difficult pieces in the programming selected by the musical director and the opportunity to rehearse and perform in concert with the highest quality guest artists, the orchestra has not only attracted better players but has reached the point where it is now offering to its audience the full range of symphonic repertoire.

● Because of all these musical opportunities, musicians have chosen to stay in the area, and this continuity itself is a necessary ingredient for the continued growth and development of the orchestra and of all the musical activities in which the orchestra members participate.

Acceptable Offer

The prospect of strike and lockout of municipal employees in the greater Victoria area prompts me to write to your paper as a means of stating the points of view of a good number of the union members who are caught in the machinery of union policy, and are likely to be unwillingly unemployed as a result of what appears to be the dictates of the majority of union members. Many members are not making themselves heard because, as individuals, they are afraid of speaking out, afraid of losing friends, being victimized or even physically hurt.

I want it to be fully understood that many of us thought the settlement proposal by management was acceptable, even generous. Personally I can say that during my 19 years at city hall I have always been dealt with fairly by management, mayors and aldermen. Had I been unhappy I always had the right, which luckily we still enjoy in Canada, to apply for work elsewhere.

During my 48 years of working and military service, I changed jobs many times until I found just what I wanted at city hall. I suggest some of my dissatisfied friends adopt this attitude. It would do them a lot of good and at least they would sample, and be qualified to compare working conditions in other employment and in other cities. Perhaps they should see what Port Alberni has to offer as a place to settle with their wives and children. After four countries and numerous jobs, Canada is the place for me and my family; and in Victoria nothing is more attractive than my present employment with or without a pay raise — and I am not a high-priced employee.

If the pending strike develops and is successful, it could perhaps gain some small additional concessions from councils in the area, but assuming the strike lasts two months, it could take the workers from five to eight years to recover their losses. I wonder just how many of those who voted to reject the city of Victoria's offer to the inside workers realized that once the strike and/or lockout is called, we the workers start losing and the municipalities start making money.

Perhaps service at city hall will not be very satisfactory, the streets won't be patched and the public will have to dump their own garbage, and the grass will grow in the parks, but for these losses the municipalities may save a couple of million dollars in wages.

With the cost of living up 12 per cent over last year, an increase of almost 16 per cent seems to me more than fair at this time of international concern over inflation.

I should add that it is neither my intention or right to criticize the stand of the outside workers, as I know little of their requests, working conditions or present pay scales.

No doubt when the dust settles and we are all a lot poorer in money and spirit, we will realize that in this so-called educated society there must be a more mature and less stupid way of settling disputes than lockouts and strikes, which cause none but the working class to suffer despite what the union bosses and some of our more eloquent colleagues tell us.

Yesterday I had many friends at city hall, and amongst the outside staff. If I still have those friends today, I will know that my right to be satisfied and to want to work is respected and this, my first letter ever to a newspaper, under: stood: J. K. Hilliard, 100 Wellington Street.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of January 27, 1915

LONDON — British Colonial Secretary Lewis Harcourt last night paid a glowing tribute to the dominions overseas for the splendid spirit of loyalty they had shown since the commencement of the war. Canada, Australia, New Zealand and India had spared neither money nor men and from the remotest islands of the Pacific, Harcourt said his none too frequent rest had been broken with telegrams pressing on him men, money, goods and even aeroplanes. Canada had made a magnificent response, he said. Two days before the war was declared, she had offered an expeditionary force.

The Flight to Fantasy

Five years ago the counterculture was in full swing, making inroads even into colleges in the backwaters of North America. Then, smoking a joint or wearing army-surplus fatigues were emblems of defiance more than a pleasant way to relax or be comfortable. Art and philosophy (except what pandered directly to youth trends) were shunned for sociology and the heady rhetoric of revolution. In more militant circles even to have a television was tantamount to a sellout; watching Star Trek would have been unthinkable. But the times, as Bob Dylan crooned with an accuracy that might appal him, are a-changin'.

Tastes among college students are doubtless bound to be somewhat eclectic, so it would be foolish to say that all college students follow any given trend. But there is usually one aspect of university culture that helps define the mood, ambience and emotional intellectual bent of students. It used to be spiced with nonconformity and rebellion; now the trend is toward otherworldliness in entertainment that's filled with fantasy and mysticism, that transcends reality.

Not all college students read books that take them into another world, see movies drenched with hidden meanings or become cult members of Kung Fu or Star Trek (not all students belonged to the Sixties Movement, either), but such things are talk among students at the moment. When you overhear conversations, watch hands reaching for certain books in bookstores and notice who's going to what movies it's hard to dismiss a trend: it's in the air like drizzle or, more aptly, one can feel the vibrations.

During the Movement (a name coined, however inappropriately, for that period when colleges were filled with revolt and drugs were a lifestyle) students had already become interested in authors like Tolkien and Hesse, but the interest had much to do with drugs. The drug scene created an Alice in Wonderland cult, soon switching to other fantasies that were nice to read while stoned after Jefferson Airplane's White Room, a landmark song attributing Alice's experiences to hallucinations.

Students Go Quiet

Mia and the Beatles trekked off to India to visit gurus, made news and probably inaugurated the popular interest in mysticism and Eastern philosophies. In the argot of the day were phrases like "far out" and "doing your own thing." Ironically, rock music and movies were closely linked to a social movement that was most definitely earthbound, and doing one's own thing was doing pretty well what everybody else did.

Much entertainment today is, indeed "far out" and students have cooled down and become interested in individual pursuits. There lies a suspicion that little old ladies and staid businessmen, when they talk about students, are saying, "My, but they're quiet." The Movement atrophied, dope lost its mystique as a lifestyle, and rock music, for the moment, seems to have exhausted its potential. Counter-culture is a meaningless term. It just doesn't connect with anything anymore.

By LAWRENCE O'TOOLE

Students have fastened themselves to fantasy and to raising their consciousness. The current literary rage in the student scene is a book called Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance by Robert M. Pirsig. The book is actually a throwback to the road movies of the early seventies: Easy Rider, Five Easy Pieces, Two Lane Blacktop — except there's a difference this time around. The hero-author isn't looking for America or an insight into social values, he's looking to define himself by finding an inner peace by caring about what things are rather than what they mean.

Personal Utopia

Since the growth of interest in Eastern thinking students have looked for a personal Utopia instead of a social one. Before, there was a concerted effort for change; now, there is a need to assimilate the disparate elements in the mind, thereby effecting change in one's personal relationships. Pirsig's book, describing the odyssey from Minnesota to the Pacific on a cycle, is meditation on the road and it connects with some of the feelings youth has now. The path to wisdom or self-knowledge is sought through an intense analysis of one's feelings and thoughts. Pirsig says that when he's on the cycle he's in the scene, as opposed to just watching it; for him, this is one way to raise consciousness, to get to the heart of things and to understand.

Tolkien's fantasy fables populated with furry hobbits, Hesse's tortured heroes painfully finding their way to understanding through much purging and gnashing of teeth, the self-aggrandizing gems from Kahlil Gibran (The Prophet, which reads as if Rod McKuen had gotten hold of the Talmud) have been steadily popular, not merely fashionable for a short time. Every bookstore has mountainous stacks of each author's works all bound together in mini-library form. It's now possible to procure expensive, annotated editions of Alice in Wonderland, Mother Goose and The Wizard of Oz (a new musical version has just opened on Broadway). The Prophet is available on record, posters have moved away from the blowups of Mae West and W. C. Fields to mandalas and Tolkien calendars, and photo-meditation books (sunlight through trees accompanied by inspirational lines) are still in vogue. Watership Down, another fantasy-fable, is being snatched up in paperback.

I Ching (the Chinese Book of Changes), books on yoga, Gnosticism, Zen, transcendentalism and Hinduism are continually popular. Finally, Eastern mysticism permeated the world of television in the form of Kung Fu which is a cult like Star Trek, now that it's gone off the national networks: The words of enlightenment from Caine, the sanctimonious hero, have profound, hidden meanings, according to students, or else they watch it for "its pacifist philosophy," "truthfulness" or "escapism." As Gary Belson, a third-year science student at York, puts it, "It's an escape that's meaningful. Through it most of my friends have taken up martial arts. It expresses a fine way to live."

Students say they see Star Trek as the ultimate escape but they are quick to point out that its philosophy is pacifist and it tackles hypothetical problems that might occur during the future, offering possible solution to them. "Give peace a chance" is no longer loudly chanted, just murmured. Star Trek is exotic, too — a futuristic fantasy filled with gadgetry and weird aliens. The show's facade, like the slow motion kicks of Caine in combat, are beautiful to look at. Some are not so articulate about liking it, but comments like, "Mr. Spock — those ears," are self-explanatory.

Young people aren't making hits out of movies any more. The studios aren't aiming for a youth audience any more, but students patronize the cheap repertory theatres which feature pop fantasies like El Topo, Yellow Submarine, Fantastic Planet, A Clockwork Orange, Fellini Satyricon and The Wizard of Oz, all of which appear with seasonal regularity. Some of the successes of the last few years — the Billy Jack phenomenon, the revivals of 2001: A Space Odyssey, the marginal success of Phantom of the Paradise and the underground one of El Topo — have been helped greatly and sometimes only by college students.

Billy Jack is a mystic communing with nature, a blood brother to the snake in Indian ritual; there are many secret meanings to be gleaned from the supercharged, violent symbolism and fantasy in El Topo that few have been able to fathom: Phantom of the Paradise is being helped financially by the need for a new pop fantasy and uses the lore of old horror movies, the Faust myth and stylized sets that go back to German expressionism.

Must Be Profound

2001, the trip movie of the decade and the bible of the esoteric experience, is another story. When the astronaut turns into a space embryo at the end there are explanations like "the continual rebirth of the universe," "creation," "reincarnation" and "infinity." A slab that often interrupts the narrative is explained as "God," "knowledge," "evolution," "the fourth dimension" and "destiny." The movie was not only a visual trip, it was an emotional-cerebral one, and it's generally agreed among students that it is profound.

A musical version of The Little Prince (an old standard in the school of whimsical fantasy) is attracting a large college crowd who have read the Saint Exupéry book, the same crowd that read Jonathan Livingston Seagull a few years ago. Jonathan sought to leave the boundaries of ordinary seagull flight to experience pure speed. Flight is the key word at the moment; revelling in the word is really taking off, even if it's erotic fantasy like Erica Jong's Fear of Flying. The flight into another dimension or reality becomes the ultimate escape and has attached the old romantic sensibility to itself.

One of the most popular authors in college circles at the moment is the drug visionary, Carlos Castaneda, whose reportage of his experiences with drugs like peyote and jimson weed have resulted in four quick bestsellers — The Teachings of Don Juan, A Separate Reality, Journey to Ixtlan and Tales of Power. He writes about another plane of human experience and here lies the appeal for students.

Castaneda's mentor, a Yaqui Indian sorcerer named Don Juan, uses high-powered drugs to "see," and when he "sees" he "sees" into the "essence of things" (Castaneda's quotes). The relationship that develops between the author-apprentice and the teacher is not unlike that between disciple and guru. Castaneda's reaching the state of "seeing" works on the level of imaginative fiction with the added advantage of having the respectability of anthropological legwork behind it. The Little Prince sees through the heart. Pirsig sees a system of thought in taking care of a motorcycle and Don Juan sees another world through the use of drugs.

The attraction of this trend that has developed can be found also in the ambiguities and enigmas it deliberately presents. Youth often can't explain these states of super-perception when asked about them. "You have to really experience it," they usually reply. Pirsig's book throws out teasers like, "It's here, but I have no names for it" and, "Reality is always the moment of vision before intellectualization takes place. There is no other reality." Pirsig, Castaneda, Kung Fu, El Topo and 2001 all rely on an intuitive grasp of what is being said or shown, like a presentiment of the meaning of the space embryo or the seagull's destiny. They blow the mind with insight or confuse it, thereby engaging it.

This interest has been around a long time but it's a continuing trend. Pop and rock survives in an ill-defined state: students run the gamut in their tastes, from John Denver to Elton John, to David Bowie, and there's no craze for any one group or performer. "It has lost its political explosiveness," says Thora Broughton, a fourth-year political science student at U of T. "Nobody is interested in politics any more; they are interested in marks and keeping body and soul together." Meanwhile, they indulge in the fun, the fantastic and the fabulous.

The Women's Movement has lost its radicalism. College women are interested in the personal views of women rather than in any woman writer who expresses a social ideology, like Germaine Greer or Kate Millet (even Millet has gone personal with her new book called, fittingly enough, Flying). They read Anais Nin, Doris Lessing and Sylvia Plath. Nin's philosophy is based on an exotic, psychoanalytic view of experience and Plath, who has been enjoying a great revival in colleges, is a mystic. Both movements, it seems, have dissipated and given way to an interest in personal values.

A Time to Relax

Youth says it's relaxing, taking it easy, and this time of relaxation can be compared to that period of the early sixties right after James Dean, Elvis and rebels without causes. "They were rough years back there with Kent State and Vietnam and all the rest of it. Everybody's tired and fantasy is very secure. It's a way to escape and leave problems and discomfort behind," says Jane Eusgibbon, a third-year student at U of T.

Students now travel to the East to see the origins of the philosophies they have read about or practiced in the past; backpackers now bypass Europe and head for the more exotic locales like India, if they already haven't. Many students I talked with expressed a desire to spend their summers with a backpack heading in that direction. Ten years later it probably won't be much of a surprise to see a man in a Brooks Brothers suit with a book of meditative musings, reciting his mantra.

They Should Tell Us Like It Is

In a new year editorial the Financial Times observed "Even more alarming to most observers than these tangible portents of disaster has been the apparent lack of awareness of that disaster in the country at large." It really wasn't necessary for the prime minister in a new year radio interview to make routine deprecations of the prophets of doom nor for the Chancellor in his new year message to assure "There is no cause for panic. There is certainly no reason for the despair which infects too much public comment." For, as the Financial Times correctly noted, the mood of the country is far from panic or despair: the prophets of doom have so far gone unheard.

The problem involved here is a serious one and at the present time is afflicting all of the Western democracies. It is the problem of political communication. The only rational basis for government is an assumption of the ultimate reasonableness of the governed. Most people are prepared to take their hat off to a fact. But what are the facts, what is the reality?

A man who believes the earth is flat may act just as rationally in terms of his perceived reality as a man who believes the earth to be round. The problem of political communication today is to substitute the reality of the changed circumstances in the world for the no-longer-true reality based on people's actual recent experience. Of course, people's sense of reality will change with their experience; in conditions of hyperinflation or mass unemployment, they would soon behave rationally in new ways but the problem of politics is to communicate an impending reality, whether a danger or an opportunity, so that rational action may be taken to avert or achieve it.

It seems to me that the politicians have failed dismally in this task, and I wish they would stop complaining about the commentators who have been honestly endeavoring to create the awareness of reality which is the necessary basis for response to political leadership. Excesses of gloom are not in order but it ought to be plain by now that the country is in less need of reassuring encouragement than of a sense of urgency.

The press in general has behaved more responsibly than the government in recent months. If the press has had to shout loud in the hope of being heard it is because the political leaders, who are the only ones capable of shouting loud enough to be heard, have barely raised their voices.

I do not mean that they should form a chorus of apocalyptic utterings. The problems which the country faces can be presented with equal accuracy as either mammoth or marginal. The consequences of failure to make marginal adjustments could be mammoth. One of the problems of democratic government is to attach urgency to incremental reform. All through the 60s we were told, truthfully, that if we could increase productivity by 1 or 2 per cent and moderate the rise in money wages by 1 or 2 per cent we would have our problems licked. Today's problems are similarly marginal.

By PETER JENKINS

At a rough guess if we reverted for a year or two to the standard of living in which we congratulated ourselves in 1970 there would be no need for any more talk about a return to the 30s. But to make these marginal adjustments sound easy is to delude the public, and Mr. Wilson and Mr. Healey still talk rusefully about a standstill in living standards and do not care to say that some reduction is necessary and, indeed, will be the consequence of the policies they are actually pursuing.

All of these decisions were of the kind which last summer, before the election, would have been checked with Mr. Jack Jones and the TUC but now, it seems, the government considers itself to have discharged its side of the Social Contract and is ready to deal with problems more according to their merits. The probable consequence before long will be a new package of deflationary measures aimed at private consumption.

However, we are not concerned here with the merits of these developments but with why should we have to deduce government policy from a careful reading of the small print in ministerial statements? Why is it thought clever or necessary to slip important policy decisions into written answers to parliamentary questions or delay major announcements until Parliament is about to rise?

And how can the government expect a response from the public, or dare to exhort it in Mr. Wilson's terms when the public is not told honestly what the government's central economic policy is or, indeed, is led to believe by carefully chosen slogans and euphemisms that the policy is the opposite of what it is?

Why, we may wonder, does it have to be so far-fetched that I almost hesitate to suggest it, for the government to experiment in a moment of what it says is unprecedented national crisis with the daring expedient of actually telling the truth? Who knows, there might then actually be some response. It is hard to see how there can be any sort of national response when so many people suspect, with much good reason, that the government is engaged in a game of its own in which the truth is a mere weapon of intra-party expediency.

Now, I do not mean to suggest that ministers spend their time devising new and ever more ingenious ways of lying to the people. What they do very often is to give the very best barrister's version of their brief; they are no worse than salesmen, copywriters, or public relations men, none of whom considers himself — or should be considered to be — a professional liar.

But the language of party politics, which is the only language most politicians know and which used to do no harm when taken with a generous pinch of salt, no longer suffices for the purpose of political communication in our modern society. Partly this may be because the party itself has lost authority. Partly it may be because television requires a new idiom which no one has yet mastered. Maybe also it is because Parliament has chosen to become a private debating club, closed to the public eye and increasingly to the world, often these days — especially at question time — a caricature of itself.

And, to be fair, the times make it difficult to find the John's we may echo the late John Strachey who in a famous and influential book of the 30s, wrote "He who supposes that an Englishman of the present day can find his way either to intellectual certainty or political consistency, without doubts, hesitations and errors, shows little appreciation of the gravity or complexity of the present situation."

Nevertheless, there are ways in which our political leaders could command the attention and capture the imagination of the public and unless some of them are soon tried it is hard to see how the country can be governed at all. For communication is the means to the recreation of a general public as counterweight to a public of disparate groups. Communication defined merely as consultation, a web of secret diplomacy among elites, is no longer sufficient. Something much more open is needed, a communications strategy for the purpose of informing a public opinion to serve as a countervailing force against the public opinions of interest groups.

The problem is not essentially one of the volume of information. The techniques of communication are less important than the habit of truth. Nor am I suggesting that there is some truth above politics any more than there is some form of government to be found about party and interest.

More than anything it is a matter of style. When a people can recognize reality in the language of their politicians, who are their orators, and can hear again their own aspirations articulated in public words, the basis for common action will once more exist. For true words can move.

Rail Rate Hike Delay Refused

OTTAWA (CP)—The Federal Court of Appeal overturned Saturday a Canadian transport commission ruling postponing part of a recent rail freight-rate increase for 60 days.

But lawyers for the railways and some provincial governments were puzzled later about whether the railways can immediately raise general commodity freight rates.

The court ruled unanimously that the commission exceeded its authority in postponing half a 25-per-cent rate increase to March 1 from Jan. 1.

But three of the five judges recommended that the commission reconsider the freight-rate case that led to the commission's Dec. 31 ruling. Two dissented from this suggestion.

The general-commodity freight rates affect about 32,000 shippers and about 22 per cent of rail-freight traffic.

The commission ruling on the freight rates Dec. 31 came only hours before a two-year freeze on general commodity freight rates was due to expire.

Eight provinces, led by Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan, had asked for a 60-day postponement of the entire 25-per-cent increase sought by the railways so they could discuss the issue with rail officials.

The commission allowed half the increase to take effect Jan. 1 and postponed the effective date of the other half to March 1. This was to allow talks between the provinces and the railways.

The federal court judges agreed with the railways and the justice department that the commission had no legal power to postpone the effective date of the rates.

But Mr. Justice A. L. Thurlow, supported by Mr. Justice John J. Urie and Mr. Justice D. V. Heald, said that the commission can and should look at the freight rate case again.

Two other judges dissented indicating they did not see a legal case for further study by the commission of the freight rate increase filed by the railways.

Mr. Justice Thurlow said that while the commission did not have the power to postpone the effective date of the rates, it could extend the time for filing and publishing the rates. Rates take effect after they are published.

STOLEN ART BELIEVED RECOVERED

LONDON (UPI)—Police said Sunday one of a group of three paintings discovered in a west London house may be a Renoir stolen from its American owner and worth $148,000.

Scotland Yard said detectives were waiting for an evaluation of art experts on whether the painting is Renoir's "Woman in a Flowered Hat," which vanished between London and the U.S. six months ago.

The official said he did not have all the details but he believed the American owner sent the painting for sale in London. It failed to reach its minimum price and was being returned to him when it was stolen.

Free Air Passes for CTC

OTTAWA (CP)—Like cabinet ministers and other high government officials, some members of the Canadian Transport Commission (CTC) get free annual air transportation on the major domestic airlines and their wives also are accorded the same privilege.

But while their husbands get the passes on an annual basis the wives, including those of members of the CTC's air transport committee, must apply to the air carrier each time they want a trip pass.

A spokesman for the commission said the annual passes for air transport committee members is simply a continuation of a policy adopted when members of the former Air Transport Board received airline courtesy passes.

He said he did not know how many such passes there were or how often they were used. He added the single trip passes available to wives must be applied for to the airline concerned.

West Coast Trail Included in Park

The historic west coast life-saving trail between Bamfield and Port Renfrew, Four Lakes and Cape Beale, will become part of Pacific Rim National Park April 1, according to a letter to the Victoria Sierra Club from Lloyd Brooks, deputy minister of conservation and recreation.

Details of the land areas to be included in the national park are as follows:

Most of the Cape Beale peninsula, adjacent to the village of Bamfield.

Tsusi, Hobbitan and Squalicum lakes, often referred to as the Nitinat triangle.

A block of land around Nitinat Cove at the southerly end of Nitinat Lake. This would include Cheewat Lake and river, an important fisheries river.

The strip of land along the seashore which includes the 55-mile-long west coast life-saving trail. This will vary from one half to one-and-a-half miles in width.

Brooks said he believes the boundary as proposed will be sufficient to preserve the remote and wilderness nature of this part of the sea coast.

Although the province in 1970 agreed to include the wilderness coast in the park, fixing the boundary was delayed to determine the land area to be turned over to the federal parks branch.

The land is currently under the jurisdiction of the B.C. Forest Department.

The boundary was actually scheduled to be named in April 1974, but the matter was delayed at the request of the province so as to "resolve certain technicalities involved" in the land transaction, Brooks said.

Brooks is referring to Tsusi, Hobbitan and Squalicum lakes, the last unlogged low-level lakes on the southern half of Vancouver Island.

Inclusion of the lakes was requested by the federal parks branch in 1970, but the proposal was opposed by major logging companies — two of them U.S.-controlled companies.

One company went further — it opposed preserving the sea coast for the public.

The Sierra Club launched a campaign to save the lakes which resulted in a long and bitter controversy between citizen groups and the industry.

The controversy attracted national attention. Professional groups, school boards and conservation organizations supported inclusion of the lakes in the park.

In Victoria, 10,000 citizens signed a petition to save the lakes from logging.

Support also came from national organizations in both Canada and the United States. The Social Credit government in its dying days agreed to include the lakes.

So did the NDP, Liberal and Conservative parties.

But most citizen groups agree today that one of the most important aspects to save the Nitinat triangle was that it made people aware that public lands on Vancouver Island, its lakes and hundreds of rivers and streams are controlled by the logging industry.

It also showed up the weaknesses of the Forest Act which ignores other land use resources — such as fisheries and recreation.

It also brought to the fore disruptive logging practices, such as clogging up rivers and creeks with debris and slash and burning practices which sometimes resulted in the destruction of thousands of acres of forest lands.

The campaign also showed that the forest department completely dominated the government's bureaucratic structure and considered itself as the sole authority on how public lands should be used.

The furor over land-use resulted in the government institution changes within the forest department and in matters dealing with land use resources.

While conservation organizations today admit there has been some improvements in logging practices they say there is still a lot to be done to curb waste of public lands, water and fisheries resources.

The government, they claim, isn't moving fast enough in this direction.

Crisis Talks Postponed

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (UPI) — The International Olympic Committee (IOC) said Monday a crisis meeting with organizers of the 1976 Montreal Games originally scheduled for Tuesday has been postponed until a Quebec legislative committee completes its studies.

The meeting had been arranged in Amsterdam between Montreal representatives and IOC president Lord Killanin plus three IOC vice-presidents.

A full report on Montreal progress and developments since the Vienna session will be studied by the IOC before the meeting to be held on Feb. 20 to 22, the IOC said.

U.S. Hedges on Airlift

Times News Services

PHNOM PENH — American officials told Cambodia today the U.S. is very reluctant to begin a Berlin-type airlift to Phnom Penh because of the danger to U.S. aircraft and that Cambodia should launch an offensive to clear the banks of the Mekong river of Communist troops.

Government officials who disclosed the U.S. statement said that, in response, the Cambodian high command told U.S. embassy officials they had neither the troops nor resources necessary for such an operation.

The exchange came as stocks of food in warehouses in the capital fell to a one-week supply. Some dealers at the capital's huge central market were forced to stop selling today because of a lack of rice and other food, shoppers reported.

Although the food supply is not yet critical, it will become so within two weeks at the most, government officials estimated today.

A battered river convoy, the second to break through a rebel blockade in four days, reached the besieged Cambodian capital Sunday with fuel and ammunition—but no food.

A tanker loaded with aviation fuel and two barges carrying ammunition pulled into Phnom Penh's docks after braving intense insurgent gunfire along the Mekong river. Six crewmen were wounded. A third fuel tanker was sunk.

U.S. planes, piloted by civilians, already are flying about 10 loads of ammunition to Phnom Penh daily, and American officials have said they are considering a Berlin-style airlift to resupply the city.

But today U.S. officials cited what they said was state department concern because of the danger to aircraft involved in any airlift.

Meanwhile, Le Duc Tho, the North Vietnamese leader who negotiated the Vietnamese ceasefire agreement signed two years ago today, has declared the Ford administration is "giving a new path to the war" by urging additional military aid for the Saigon government.

In an address on North Vietnamese television monitored in Saigon, Tho said South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu must be overthrown because he has "scrapped" the Paris agreement.

WOMEN GRADUATES DON'T EARN AS MUCH AS MEN GRADUATES. WHY NOT?

Canada has one of the finest educational systems in the world. But many Canadian employers unjustifiably underpay some very well-educated graduates of that system. Women.

A 24-year-old male, leaving university with a degree, earns on the average 19 per cent more in his first job than a woman of the same age with the same degree. A male high-school graduate can expect an average 34.2 per cent more than the equivalent female graduate. It just isn't right.

It just isn't right, either, that long before graduation, some schools still insist on channelling girls into home economics classes and boys into industrial arts.

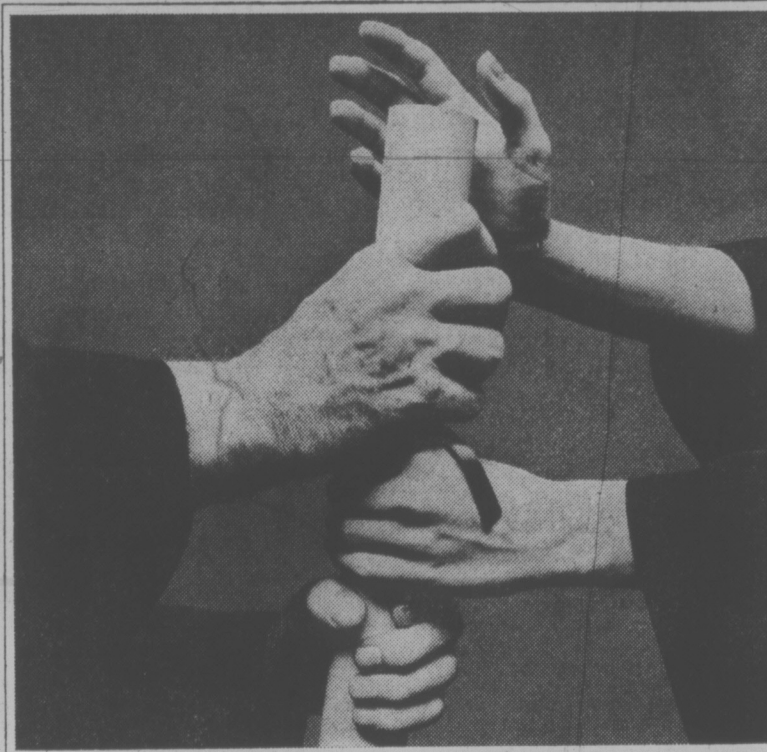

Some girls make excellent mechanics and engineers. Some boys make excellent designers and chefs. Why curb their natural talents?

There is no logical reason why we should. Equal educational opportunities are guaranteed us under law, but there are prejudices and precedents. Society expects women to cook and sew because it expects them to get married one day. Don't men get married too? Maybe they should learn household skills as well.

When it comes to employment, the same kind of archaic thinking brings us less pay and recognition. Certainly women get married, but many keep on working. Of some three million women working in Canada today, more than 50 per cent are married. Why are they being paid less than their husbands? Because they are married? How about a single working woman? It costs her as much to live as a single working man. So why is she also being forced to live on less? Particularly when 50.0 per cent of all Canadian women in the labour force, having completed their high-school education, have gone on to take post-secondary training, compared to 39.3 per cent of the men. So no one can use the excuse that working women are less qualified.

The entire situation must change. But if it is to change, we have to start thinking of ourselves as equals. And demanding that others do, too.

We have to teach our children to think differently. Because they are the next generation of educators and homemakers, employers and employees. We must break down the barriers of prejudice for ourselves and remove them entirely for our children.

Highway Building Costs Jump

VANCOUVER (CP) — Road-building in B.C. will cost more in 1975 than it did last year, says Gil Jacobs, president of the B.C. Roadbuilders Association.

In a report released by the association, Jacobs says there have been increases of 30 to 45 per cent in prices of equipment and parts, steel, fuels and other commodities contractors use.

He also says shortage of equipment, parts and some steel products are continuing, while wage rates increased 19 per cent in 1974 and contracts with unions expire Feb. 28.

He said road builders were hopeful but uncertain about the amount of highways the government will build in 1975 following "one of the worst years ever."

The most significant developments are in the northern part of Vancouver Island, Jacobs says, where $12.4 million in contracts have been let for construction of 19 miles, and on the Stewart-Cassiar highway, where contracts amounting to $8-million have been let for $33 million.

Trio Bids On Aston Martin

LONDON (AP) — A three-man group made up of businessmen from the United States, Britain and Canada has submitted a $3.08 million formal offer to buy Aston Martin Lagonda Ltd., Peter Sprague, a member of the group said Friday.

Sprague said the offer was conditional on receiving certain further information from the luxury car company, which is in receivership.

Sprague is chairman of the American firm National Semiconductor Corp., but is acting in an individual capacity in the Aston Martin bid.

The group's offer, made in a letter of intent, was presented at a meeting Thursday of Aston Martin creditors and shareholders who agreed to delay for at least six months any moves to liquidate the company.

Sprague said his group's offer for Aston Martin was conditional on receiving a list of the company's creditors, a breakdown of its sales for the past three years and basic balance sheet information for the same period.

He indicated that after full financial details are known the group might be bidding less than the present offer.

The company's output has been about 200-350 cars annually, and Sprague said his group didn't plan to make the company any larger.

George Minjen, owner of Grand Touring Automobiles Ltd. of Toronto which imports Aston Martins, was in Britain recently to submit a bid on behalf of a group of businessmen for the British auto firm.

Sony

Sony Corp. expects consolidated net profit to be $16-$20 million in the first three months ending Jan. 31, about half the extraordinarily high $36.8 million a year earlier and down from $28.3 million in the more normal first quarter of fiscal 1973, Noboru Yoshii, senior managing director, said in Tokyo.

He made the forecast as Sony released its consolidated results for the last quarter of fiscal 1974 and for the full year.

Fourth-quarter profit fell to about $13.5 million, or 79 cents per share, from about $16 million, or $1.03 cents per share, a year earlier.

Sony's fourth-quarter consolidated sales rose to about $329 million from about $280.5 million a year earlier. Sales for all of fiscal 1974 totalled about $1.32 billion, up from about $1.04 billion the previous year.

Westcoast

Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. reports an offer has been made through the Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal Stock Exchanges to purchase 400,000 shares of Westcoast Petroleum Ltd. common stock at $4.50 a share.

Westcoast Transmission currently holds 1,616,875 of the total 4,025,130 outstanding common shares of Westcoast Petroleum. The proposed purchase would increase Westcoast Transmission's holding to more than 50 per cent.

"This stronger position in Westcoast Petroleum will permit us to take a more active role in the management of this promising oil and gas exploration company," Kelly Gibson, chairman of Westcoast Transmission, said.

Of the Westcoast Petroleum stock not owned by Westcoast Transmission, over 40 per cent is held in the United States. According to Gibson, the proposed purchase could repatriate a considerable amount of stock to Canada and increase the over-all Canadian ownership of Westcoast Transmission.

BBC Realty

The trustees of Bank of British Columbia Realty Investors announced Thursday net income for the second year of operation was $2,106,920 compared to $924,018 in 1973.

Total assets rose to $73.9 million in 1974 from $43.3 million in 1973, reflecting a net increase of $30.6 million, while outstanding commitments as of Dec. 31, 1974 were $11.7 million.

The trustees said the final income distribution, when added to previous distributions during 1974, brings the total "to an amount in excess of $1.24 per outstanding trust unit for the year."

Kaiser

Kaiser Resources Ltd. has declared a quarterly dividend of 15 cents per common share payable on March 24, 1975 to shareholders of record at the close of business on March 7, 1975.

Edgar Kaiser, Jr., president and chief executive officer, said the dividend is the first to be declared by the company since its incorporation in 1967.

The company also reported consolidated net earnings for 1974 of $24,158,000 or $1.01 a share, including an extraordinary income tax credit of $11,496,000 or 48 cents a share from tax losses carried forward. The results also included foreign exchange gains of $328,000 resulting primarily from retirement of U.S. dollar debt. Earnings per share were based on a weighted average of 23,954,000 shares outstanding during the year. Sales for the year were $142,597,000.

In 1973, Kaiser Resources had net earnings of $3,478,000 or 22 cents a share, including extraordinary income of $694,000 or four cents per share and foreign exchange gains of $1,485,000.

Bombardier Buys MLW-Worthington

MONTREAL (CP) — J. Armand Bombardier Ltd. has announced acquisition of majority control of MLW-Worthington Ltd. by purchasing 59.4 per cent of the Montreal company's stock from the parent, firm, Studebaker-Worthington Inc. of Harrison, N.J.

MLW-Worthington officials would neither confirm nor deny the acquisition.

A Bombardier spokesman said the snowmobile manufacturer, based in Valcourt, Que., reached a firm agreement last week with Studebaker and purchased 475,200 shares at $21 a share for a total price of $9,979,200.

Bombardier's acquisition is part of a previously announced plan to obtain all outstanding shares at $21 a share of MLW-Worthington, a locomotive manufacturer.

When it was first announced Bombardier intended to acquire control of MLW-Worthington, a spokesman said the company would make an offer at the end of the month to obtain all outstanding shares, subject to the condition that at least 90 per cent of the shares were tendered.

A Bombardier statement at that time said that with the current orientation to mass transport, MLW and Bombardier would constitute together the largest independent Canadian organization manufacturing transportation equipment.

Although Bombardier is noted mainly for snowmobiles, it has diversified into other products and recently was awarded a multi-million dollar contract to build cars for the Montreal subway.

MLW-Worthington's locomotives are in use in several countries. The company was involved last year in a controversial transaction to ship locomotives to Cuba.

Stocks Rise on Broad Front As Interest Rates Fall Off

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

The collapse in short-term interest rates is producing the first good news for stock investors in more than a year.

Stock prices were up on a broad front in Toronto, New York and London at the close of trading Friday in response to rumors of further drops in the interest rates.

There were signs investors were moving out of short-term bank deposits and back into shares.

In Toronto, prices were up for 480 stocks on Friday, the largest number in more than a year. Only 103 issues were down.

In New York, the Dow Jones rose 9.85 points to 666.61 and London prices were up strongly.

The upward trend continued in early trading today in all three markets.

Stocks leading the surge in Toronto were gold and oils. Spurring the oils was news of a significant discovery by Shell Canada Ltd. in the Mackenzie River delta. Other oil companies with interests in the area also moved up.

Forecasts for higher oil and natural gas prices this year also encouraged a price surge.

Real estate stocks were gaining as were chemicals and steels, which made their largest gains since October.

Communication stocks were also up.

During the week all major Toronto indexes were up. The industrial index gained 7.46 points to 175.8, the highest level since Aug. 20.

Main spur to the market was a decline in short-term interest rates from 10.5 per cent to about 6.5 per cent. In addition, long-term rates began to move downward.

Banks cut their prime rate from 11 per cent to 10.5 per cent and the Bank of Montreal has announced a further reduction to 9.75 per cent, effective Feb. 1.

Mortgage interest rates fell from 12 per cent to 11.5 per cent.

The Toronto office of National Trust announced it would lower its mortgage interest rate to 11 per cent, effective immediately.

There were indications the mortgage rate would fall to 10.75 per cent, the current level offered by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation for special mortgages to lower income families.

Some trust company spokesmen warned that interest rates might exhibit zig-zag pattern over the next few months because rates were falling too quickly to permit an orderly financial market.

This could cause rates to correct themselves with small increases before edging downwards again.

Meanwhile, the stock market would exhibit a reverse zig-zag effect, with the trend being upwards.

Showdown in the WCHL

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Pat Ginnell is angry. So much so, in fact, the owner, manager and coach of the Victoria Cougars is prepared to run the risk of forfeiting Tuesday's scheduled Western Canada Hockey League game at Memorial Arena against the Kamloops Chiefs.

Upset by the possible loss of defenceman Kim Clackson and what he feels is an "unwarranted threat" by Ed Chynoweth, Ginnell said Sunday he will not pay a $1,000 fine before a 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline as ordered by the league president.

Chynoweth imposed the fine, the deadline and a three-game suspension on Ginnell after brawling encounters in Brandon and Winnipeg last week.

In addition, Clackson was suspended for six games, winger Eric Sanderson "indefinitely" and defenceman Larry Gloeckner for one game.

Obviously upset by his third extended suspension of the season, Clackson failed to accompany the team when it returned from Winnipeg on Saturday. Clackson returned instead to his Saskatoon home to consider his future.

Kim was unavailable for comment but his father, Gerry, said Sunday the rugged Cougar captain "is quite upset" by his latest suspension. He had been suspended twice—each time for four games—earlier this season.

"Kim just doesn't know what to do," said the elder

Clackson, who also scouts for the Victoria team. "He feels he's being penalized for his reputation and, as such, it isn't helping the team."

Ginnell also feels Clackson, who has compiled 268 penalty minutes this season, "is a marked man."

But Ginnell seemed more upset with Chynoweth, an attitude that indicates the Victoria coach expects Clackson to rejoin the team after a few days at home.

"I'm not paying the fine but I expect there will be a game Tuesday," Ginnell said. "Mr. Chynoweth has no business threatening me that way."

"Nobody closes down a business because one employee has done something wrong. That, in effect, is what Chynoweth wants to do. It becomes matter of principle. I'm not paying the fine until I can appeal to the board of governors."

"I can live with the suspension. I've paid my share of fines and can take another one. But no one is going to threaten me," he added.

Ginnell also warned that Chynoweth would be "faced with the quickest injunction in legal history" if he tries to "cancel the Tuesday game."

"The fine is supposedly because I didn't control my players," Ginnell added. "How can I control my players when, in the game in question, I was ejected from the game?"

Ginnell also feels Chynoweth is "making up his own rules." He cited Sanderson's suspension as an example. Displaying a copy of a league memo, Ginnell noted that players receiving match penalties are subject to two-game suspensions for the first infraction, four games for the second.

"How can he give Sanderson an indefinite suspension?" Ginnell asked. "The penalty is down in black and white for all... except Chynoweth."

Clackson's departure for his home and Ginnell's stand took the weekend spotlight from Danny Lucas. The 16-year-old winger from Powell River scored four goals Saturday night as the Cougars defeated Calgary Centennials 9-5 at Memorial Arena.

Lucas, who will be 17 on Feb. 28, now has counted 12 goals in the last six games and is only the third player in the league to reach the 40-goal level. Linemate Mel Bridgman, who scored his 43rd Saturday, and Medicine

Hat's Don Murdoch, with 37, are the only players with more.

The Cougars, playing without Sanderson, Clackson and the injured Gord Roberts, had no difficulty in handling Calgary for the fifth straight time.

Calgary's two top scorers—Don Ashby and Dennis McLean—both played despite the flu.

Murdoch scored three times Saturday, running his total to 37, in a free-wheeling 11-9 Medicine Hat victory over Saskatoon Blades.

The Centennials were victimized again, 6-3, Sunday in New Westminster while in other games, Regina Pats edged Brandon Wheat Kings 2-1 and Jerry Banks counted four times as Lethbridge Broncos tied Edmonton 7-7.

The West Is Sticking To Its Guns

TORONTO (CP) — The Western Canada Hockey League hasn't compromised any of its demands after weekend meetings with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA), WCHL president Ed Chynoweth said on the weekend.

"I hope it doesn't sound like we've backed off," Chynoweth said in an interview. "Our position hasn't changed any."

"The next move is for the CAHA to decide how it will react to our concerns."

Last week Chynoweth said league governors had voted unanimously to withdraw from the CAHA, citing a lack of leadership in pressing the professional leagues for overdue draft payments.

Chynoweth met with officials of the Quebec and Ontario Major Junior leagues Friday. A set of proposals from the three leagues were taken by the CAHA officers to the semi-annual meeting of the CAHA directors Saturday.

The officers were authorized by the membership to pursue further meetings with the junior leagues in an attempt to negotiate a compromise.

"Our big concern is still the fact the pros can sign our players as early as October and not pay for them until January," Chynoweth said. "We can't operate on that basis and there has to be a better solution than to wait that long to be paid."

Clarence (Tubby) Schmalz, commissioner of the Ontario Major Junior League, said the National Hockey League's draft payment was in the mail to the CAHA and that payment from the World Association "is expected to be forthcoming shortly."

The two professional leagues owe more than $600,000 for players signed and drafted from last June's amateur draft. The CAHA passes the payments on to the various teams.

Chynoweth was not happy with news of the expected payments or with Schmalz's assertion that problems that were regarded as major by the WCHL are only minor by the standards of the Ontario and Quebec leagues.

"The agreement was for them to pay for all drafted and signed players by Nov. 30. Do we put them on the back for coming up big on Jan. 25?"

"I know we have very serious financial problems and we are very concerned about them whether anybody else is or not."

Gordon Juckes, executive director of the CAHA, said the national association would be receptive to a western proposal that the size of negotiating committees in future talks with the professional leagues be reduced to four or five on each side instead of the 12 now allowed.

The juniors also asked for a change in promotional arrangements for future Memorial Cup playoffs.

In a later interview, Chynoweth said he is hopeful his league will work out its problems and not break off from the CAHA.

"Dallas plays seven games in 14 days," said Hawks coach Billy Reay. "Dale can get into shape and regain his confidence. Up here, I'd be using him for a few minutes each game and you don't get into condition that way."

The Hawks are three points behind Vancouver and hold a game in hand on the Canucks. At Montreal, Guy Lafleur registered his first four-goal performance in the NHL and Peter Mahovlich added a pair of goals to pace the Canadiens attack.

Edmonton hockey fans got a look at Frank Mahovlich in vintage form Sunday night.

Mahovlich picked the sagging Toronto Toros up by their bootstraps, scoring a pair of goals and killing many of his team's seven penalties as the Toros dropped the hometown Oilers 7-5.

Mahovlich's goals, his 19th and 20th, kept the Toros from sliding into a second-place tie with the Oilers in the Canadian Division. The win gave Toronto a four-point edge.

In Sunday's other games, Houston Aeros downed Winnipeg Jets 3-1, Vancouver Blazers defeated Chicago Cougars 5-3, Phoenix Roadrunners blanked Indianapolis Racers 6-0 and Minnesota Fighting Saints edged Baltimore Blades 2-1.

Cleveland Crusaders edged Baltimore 2-1, Quebec Nordiques downed Chicago 6-4 and San Diego Mariners beat New England Whalers 6-2 Saturday.

Nanaimo Curlers Represent Island

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

DUNCAN — Nanaimo rinks proved much the best in the Island Consols playdowns at the Duncan Curling Club on the weekend. And for the first time in history, two Nanaimo rinks will represent the Island zone in the Pacific Coast Curling Association playoffs at the Vancouver Arbutus Club Jan. 31-Feb. 2.

Norm Thiessen, a Nanaimo high school teacher, skipped his foursome to a 10-7 victory over clubmate Jack Taylor in the "A" final Saturday night. Then Taylor returned in the "B" final Sunday afternoon to defeat the veteran Glen Harper of Duncan 10-9 and capture the second Island berth.

Harper earlier Sunday had advanced to the "B" final with a tight 9-8 triumph over Bob Gallagher of Playland, last of the Victoria rinks. Saturday night Harper, scoring in only three ends — three in the fourth, five in the eighth and three in the 11th — eliminated Brad Clarke, 19, of Victoria Club. Gallagher, meanwhile, was taking care of Steve Skillings, also 19, of Victoria club 8-6.

Earlier, Taylor scored his first win 9-8 over Harper in "A" side with a steal of one in the 12th end. Clarke defeated Ralph Boyd of Campbell River 12-9, Thiessen trimmed Skillings 12-7 and Gallagher had remained alive with a 7-3 victory over Pat Horning of Comox Valley.

Although Thiessen always appeared to have control in his win over Taylor, after getting a big four on the second end, it turned out that he was a fortunate winner and Taylor an unlucky loser in "A" event.

Trailing 9-7 on the 12th, Taylor had four rocks in the rings and the hammer when Thiessen put his last stone about six inches in front of a Taylor rock in the four-foot. Taylor, trying to split off the Thiessen rock, hit it too full. Thiessen's rock hit another Taylor rock and stuck for shot.

However in the "B" event final, Taylor matched Harper shot for shot in a see-saw battle and broke a 7-7 tie with a deuce in the 11th when Harper elected to try for a steal but his last rock wide open. In the 12th, Taylor simply ran Harper out of rocks.

Harper won his match from Gallagher by scoring two on the 11th, then forcing Gallagher to attempt a difficult double on the final rock to count two and force a tie.

Gallagher made the double but, unfortunately, his shooter rolled out. It was Harper's second win over Gallagher in this year's event.

Thiessen broke his game open against Skillings in the first end with a steal of four and was never threatened.

For Thiessen it is his second trip to the PCCA finals. He represented Nanaimo at Duncan in 1970 and was eliminated then by Lyall Darg who went on to represent B.C. in the Brier.

For Taylor, it is first attempt. Taylor formerly played with Thiessen, their rink winning two provincial Kinsmen championships and one national crown.

Other rinks qualifying for the PCCA final are Gary Sutherland of Cloverdale, Larry McLaughlin of Richmond, Vic Wanco and Gene Krause of Vancouver, Jake Block of Abbotsford and Jack Trueman of Victoria.

Winner will meet the B.C. Curling Association champion in a best-of-three series at Prince Rupert Feb. 10-11, with the winner of that series representing B.C. in the Dominion curling championship at Fredericton, N.B., March 3-8.

Members of the winning rinks are:

Norm Thiessen, Doug Sutherland, Harry Whittam, Jack Dougan.

Jack Taylor, Archie McIntosh, Barry Manson, Darrol Kurtnick.

Canucks Clip Leafs

By The Canadian Press

Toronto Maple Leafs return to the friendly confines of Maple Leaf Gardens this week after a road trip that got off to a promising start but had a horrible ending.

The Leafs, forced to take an extended trip because of an ice show at the Gardens, defeated St. Louis Blues and Montreal Canadiens to begin their swing, snapping Montreal's 21-game unbeaten streak in the process.

Last Sunday, after losing to Boston Bruins, the Leafs headed for the West Coast for games in Oakland, Los Angeles and Vancouver. Not only did the Leafs drop all three games out West, but they were outscored 20-5 in the process.

Sunday afternoon in Vancouver, the Canucks extended their winning streak to three games to protect their lead atop the Smythe Division, by downing Toronto 6-4.

In other Sunday action, Chicago Black Hawks edged California Seals 3-2, Montreal Canadiens crushed Pittsburgh Penguins 7-2, New York Rangers edged Los Angeles Kings 3-2, Atlanta Flames nipped Buffalo Sabres 4-3, Washington Capitals topped Detroit Red Wings 6-3 and Boston Bruins and Philadelphia Flyers fought to a 2-2 tie.

Saturday night, Buffalo took Montreal 7-6, Los Angeles and New York Islanders played to a 5-5 draw, Pittsburgh topped the Rangers 5-2, Detroit beat Washington 5-2, Chicago dumped St. Louis 4-1 and Minnesota North Stars snapped an 11-game winless streak with a 4-1 win over Kansas City Scouts.

Greg Boddy, Ron Sedlbauer, Leon Rochefort, Dennis Ververgaert, Paul Boudreau and Mike Robitaille scored for the Canucks before 15,570 fans.

Darryl Stittler and Inge Hammarstrom scored two goals each for Toronto, who lost 8-4 to the Kings Thursday and 6-1 to California Friday.

The Leafs may have lost the services of defenceman Bob Neely for an indefinite period. Neely hurt an ankle when he fell into the boards with the Canucks' Don Lever in the second period.

In Chicago, Dennis Hull scored his first goal in 10 games to start the Hawks en route to their second win in a week over California.

"I knew it had been a long time," said Hull. "I hadn't been paying much attention to it the last few games because we have been winning."

"It's when you lose that you worry about not scoring goals," Dallas plays seven games in 14 days," said Hawks coach Billy Reay. "Dale can get into shape and regain his confidence. Up here, I'd be using him for a few minutes each game and you don't get into condition that way."

Title Fight May Get Green Light

Ramon Velazquez, president of the World Boxing Council, which threatened to strip Muhammad Ali of title recognition if the heavyweight champion fights Chuck Wepner March 24, said Sunday his organization might still sanction the fight.

Velazquez said that Wepner, of Bayonne, N.J., currently ranked 13th by the WBC, could be re-ranked so that he would be among the top 10 contenders.

"I think there could be a possibility the title fight will come off," said Velazquez in an interview.

The Ali-Wepner fight will be part of a closed-circuit television doubleheader which also involves a bout between George Foreman and Oscar Bonavena.

Cullin Top Sculler

Mike Cullin is usually the class of most sculling competitions he enters and Sunday he was once again on top.

Cullin, a student at Brentwood College and a Canadian champion, swept to the overall sculling championship Sunday at the Victoria City Rowing Club regatta at Elk Lake.

Cullin, who captured the senior event, had a best time of 28:53 for the four-mile course. Leif Gottfredsen of Victoria was runnerup with a 29:43 time while Steve Sideboham of Victoria, who took the light singles event, was third at 31:48.

Other winners were Grant McPhee (35:09) of Brentwood and Matt Arrol (34:45) of Shawnigan Lake School in junior singles, Ken McTae (37:21) of Victoria in fibreglass singles, Doug Knight (38:02) of Shawnigan in youth singles and Martin Blane of Shawnigan with a 21:25 time for 4,000 metres in the Cox division.

Shawnigan Lake School won the team event while Victoria City Rowing Club was second.

UVic Back on Top

University of Victoria Vikings climbed back into first place in the premier division of the Vancouver Island Soccer League Sunday by defeating Oak Bay 6-0 at UVic.

The win vaulted the Vikings one point ahead of idle London Boxing Club, which took over first place the week before the Christmas break.

Nanaimo City moved into a tie with the Boxers by trimming Gorge Molsons 3-0 Sunday at Heywood Avenue Park. Boxers, however, have two games in hand on Nanaimo City and one on the Vikings.

Mike Sales led the UVic attack with three goals, one on a penalty shot. Brian Barracough, Mark Robb and Tim Page scored the other goals for UVic.

In other premier division matches Sunday, Brian Gomez scored three goals to spark Powell River to a 6-1 win over Prospect Lake at Topaz Park and Steve Forsland and Greg Booth each tallied twice to lead Vic West to a 7-2 triumph over Duncan at Henderson Park.

Rogers, Howells Best

Diana Rogers and Dave Howells captured the top singles titles Saturday in the Victoria City Badminton Tournament at the Racquet Club of Victoria.

Rogers took the women's "A" singles division by defeating Liz Anne Ogden 11-5, 5-11, 11-5, while Howells beat Bob Lewis 17-14, 15-7, for the men's "A" title.

Ogden made it to the winner's circle in women's "A" doubles when she teamed with Lyn Polson to defeat Jean Westcott and Maureen Hibberson, 7-15, 15-10, 15-0.

The men's "A" doubles title went to John Meija and Warren Sweeney for their 15-11, 15-12 victory over Dennis Clements and Bob Lewis.

Bob and Lynn Lewis captured the mixed "A" doubles by tripping Rogers and Howells 7-15, 15-11, 15-3 in the final.

Scorpions Ease Up For Weekend Split

By D'ARCY KAVANAGH
Times Staff

Victoria Scorpions would have had trouble Sunday convincing anyone they had clinched first place in the Dogwood Inter-City Senior "A" Men's Basketball League a week earlier.

After overpowering North Shore Mountaineers 111-87 Saturday at Central Junior High School, Scorpions didn't look anything like a top club against the visiting Mountaineers Sunday when they dropped a 90-83 decision.

The victory for Mountaineers was a crucial one as it lifted them into a fourth-place tie with Burnaby-New Westminster Broncos. The two clubs will meet Thursday to decide who will meet the Scorpions in a best-of-three semi-final starting Feb. 1 in Victoria.

Scorpions had trouble rebounding against the taller Mountaineers, committed several glaring turnovers and shot poorly.

The Victoria club failed to improve when coach Howard Tooby stepped using his bench, and went back to his first stringers in the second half.

Bob Burrows led Scorpions with 22 points with Brian MacKenzie chipping in 19 and Dave Morgan 14. Bob Dickson scored 19 points to top the Mountaineers, who trailed 44-37 at the half.

Saturday, Tooby had more success with his bench as six players reached double figures with Bob Burrows again leading the way with 19 points, one better than teammate Tom Holmes, who pulled down a team high 11 rebounds.

Stan Callegari and Vern Porter each had 21 points for the Mountaineers, who had 34-48 lead at the half.

VICTORIAN PINS SIX FOR CROWN

NORTH VANCOUVER Clark Davis, a 17-year-old competitor with the Victoria Wrestling Club, pinned all six of his opponents in the first round Saturday to win the 168-pound title in the B.C. junior wrestling championships at Windsor High School.

Davis, a grade 12 student at Spectrum Community School, was one of nine wrestlers from the Victoria Club in the meet. Four other Victoria competitors placed among the top finishers.

Mark Knowles, 14, was third in the 89-pound division; Rolf Schetterer, 14, was third in the heavyweight class; Perry Evans was fourth in the 136-pound category and Bob Stainforth was fourth in the 118-pound competition.

Kuhn Takes Consolation

VANCOUVER Pat Richardson of the host Jericho Tennis Club defeated veteran George Morfitt in three straight games to win the Jericho Invitational A squash tournament.

Jane Dixon of the host club, a former Canadian national champion, beat clubmate Barbara Savage 3-2 for the women's cup title, while in the men's consolation, Egon Kuhn of Victoria defeated clubmate Phil Green 3-0.

Trial Testing Before Races

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Pre-racing testing of competitors, on a trial basis, will be introduced to Canadian horse racing within a year, the annual convention of the National Association of Canadian Race Tracks has been told.

"We made a resolution to implement at the earliest possible time a research program on pre-race testing," Sid Pratt, chief supervisor of the federal agriculture department, told an afternoon session of the convention.

"It will be a pilot program and we intend to pursue the matter as soon as possible."

Pratt said it is likely that only tracks in Toronto, Vancouver and Montreal will be considered as a site for the pilot program because those are the only cities with permanent laboratory facilities.

Uvic Cagers Face Rough Road

while fourth-place Calgary Dinosaurs shipped Saskatchewan Huskies 69-55.

This coming weekend is a key one in the men's scramble. Vikings are at Calgary and UBC is at Alberta for Friday-Saturday doubleheaders. Although the Vikings beat the Dinosaurs twice at home earlier this season, Calgary has been improving steadily since then and can claim Alberta as one of the victims among its seven victories. They'll be tough at home.

Vikettes, on the other hand, are favored to sweep both its games this weekend in Calgary against the winless Dinosaurs. And if Pandas can gain a split of their twin bill at home against the Thunderettes, Vikettes' chances for a first-place finish will brighten considerably.

That's important because there is no playoff this year in the women's league. The first-place finisher qualifies for the Canadian inter-collegiate women's tournament in March in Fredericton, N.B.

The first two finishers in the men's league play off for the right to advance to the national college final in Waterloo, Ont., also in March.

Turnovers and Alberta's Dan Court beat the Vikings Saturday. Uvic was charged with 28 turnovers in the face of Bears' pressing man-to-man defense and Court was constantly from the outside, hitting for 16 points.

Vikings held a 36-34 edge in rebounds, led by Dave Mulcahy who pulled down 11. Mulcahy scored 11 points for the losers while Jim Dudgeon had 13.

Off nights by Marg Mainwaring and Edna Ritchie, two of Vikettes' leading scorers, hindered the home team against the Pandas. Lorna McHattie's eight points was tops for the losers.

Lorie bright spot for Uvic Saturday was a 67-60 victory over Douglas College of Vancouver in a junior varsity contest.

BACK TO GRIND IN VOLLEYBALL

It's back to the practice grind for the Canadian women's volleyball team today following a 3-1 loss Saturday to the touring Korean Highway Corporation team in an exhibition match at the UVic McKinnon Building.

The Canadians, showing flashes of brilliance but guilty of mental lapses, dropped a 15-7, 10-15, 15-10, 15-8 decision to the visitors, ranked third in South Korea.

Coach Moo Park, aiming to improve on Canada's 11th-place finish in the last world championship, took his team back to Vancouver to resume three-hour daily workouts seven days a week.

Saturday's victory enabled the Koreans to complete their tour with a 4-3 series edge over Canada. The Highway team now heads for a week in California.

Improvement in the Canadian women's style was evident since their last appearance here a year ago when they played against the People's Republic of China. A more sophisticated system, still in the early stages of development, enabled Canada to hold an edge in the second game and the early stages of the third.

But errors at the outset of the first match proved costly as Canada fell behind 12-4.

Soon Ock Chung, a five-foot-eight player who was on Korea's 1972 bronze medal Olympic team, was her team's most effective spiker. The Koreans scored most of their points by driving spinning shots over Canada's front line into openings in the middle.

The Canadians held a height advantage over their opponents, who averaged five feet, six inches, but the Koreans offset it by digging out and returning spikes, which were Canada's most effective weapon. Audrey Vandervelden, at six feet, two inches, was Canada's best spiker.

Diane Murray set up several spikes and played a strong game at the service line, serving five straight points to wrap up the second game and four straight points in the fourth game. Other good serves came from team captain Kathy Bickerstaff. Mary Dempster and Betty Baxter were Canada's best blockers.

Title to Vic High

Greater Victoria high schools came up with a championship, two consolation titles, a second-place finish and a third-place showing in boys' basketball tournaments on the weekend.

Vic High Totems won the tournament title at Alberni by downing Alberni Chieftains 76-64 in the final. Spectrum took the consolation crown in the same tournament by beating Maple Ridge 75-66. Roy Gerath with 19 points and Gord Gummer with 17 paced Spectrum while Terry Lige scored 31 points for Maple Ridge.

The second-place finish was logged by Esquimalt Dockers in the Tillicum tournament at Reynolds. Dockers lost the championship game 61-55 to Kelowna Owls, who swept to a 5-0 record. Esquimalt and Reynolds were the host schools.

Belmont Braves won the consolation championship by downing Penticton Lake 72-66.

Named to the first all-star team in the Tillicum event were Ben Shotton of Esquimalt, Mickey Welder and Ray Zolnek of Kelowna, Brian Bartlett of Grand Forks and Bruce Robertson of Belmont. On the second team were Doug Phillips of Grand Forks, Doug Webster of Prince George, Dave Fleming of Carson Graham, Keith Bridge of Reynolds and Wayne Sticklin of Penticton.

Mr. Douglas Rams finished third in the Vancouver Technical School tournament by beating Notre Dame 76-51. Tom Watson counted 25 points for the Rams while John McManaman added 18. Both were named to the all-star team.

Vancouver Tech won the tournament by beating North Delta 75-62.

In an exhibition game at Oak Bay High, the Bays posted an 83-52 victory over Cowichan Timbermen. Steve Pescod scored 16 points for the winners while Larry Dalziel had 14, Dennis Trumpy 12 and Scott Noble 11 points and 12 rebounds. Rob Evans and Peter Wilson counted 13 points each for Cowichan.

In the Greater Victoria high school girls' league, meanwhile, Mt. Doug Rambler coach Earl Hockin is appealing a forfeiture ruling made by league chairman Rick Tschirter. Ramblers were ordered to forfeit a game last Thursday against Claremont after the Mt. Doug team arrived late.

Ramblers rolled to a 58-8 victory over Parkland on the weekend while Vic High Tigers downed Belmont Tomahawks 45-18.

Montreal Not At IOC Talks

LONDON (AP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, is going to Amsterdam Tuesday to talk with his three vice-presidents on problems threatening the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal.

But he denied a Canadian report that he had summoned the organizing committee from Montreal to attend.

"The Montreal people will not be there," Killanin said Sunday in an interview.

He added that Roger Rouseau, commissioner for the Games, had wanted to come over and report to him personally on the delay in building the main stadium and the escalation of costs.

But hearings of the Quebec national assembly committee, which has been discussing the Olympics' budget, has been adjourned until Tuesday.

"Obviously nobody can come over from Montreal until that hearing is finished," Killanin said. "I understand that the hearing is going quite well."

Jim Worrall, Canadian member of the IOC executive, is expected at the meeting.

"He will bring facts, which is what we need," Killanin said. "I have been in constant touch with him since this trouble began."

Construction of the stadium fell two months behind schedule because of a strike by ironworkers, and some Montreal officials expressed doubts that it would be finished in time for the Games in July, 1976.

The Games' budget, listed last October as $310 million, is now put at $653 million. Montreal faces a deficit of more than $300 million and the federal government has said it will not help.

The Canadian Olympic Association told the Montreal organizing committee in a letter recently that it must decide by Feb. 15 whether to go ahead with the Games or withdraw. But Killanin and other IOC officials have said there is no question of withdrawal.

A meeting is scheduled for Feb. 20, probably in Lausanne, Switzerland. Killanin said the Montreal organizing committee will be there.

"By that time we shall know the facts and we shall know what action to take."

Chemainus Rallies For Tie

Chemainus Blues rallied in the third period Saturday to gain a 7-7 tie with Ingham Buckaroos in a South Island Big Six Hockey-League game at Fuller Lake Arena.

Bob Wilson scored twice to lead Blues and Bill Pettinger fired two goals to pace Buckaroos.

Lake Cowichan Lakers managed a 5-5 tie with Anchorage Wolverines during an exhibition contest Sunday in the Alaskan city.

Wendy Cook Sparkles

CHRISTCHURCH, N. Z. (CP-AP) — Brilliant performances Sunday by Canadian swimmers wound up the first New Zealand Games.

Wendy Cook, 18-year-old Vancouver resident who was named Canada's female athlete of the year in 1974, Wendy Quirk of Pointe Claire, Que., and Becky Smith of Edmonton starred for Canada.

Miss Cook, a physical education student at University of British Columbia, won the 200-metre backstroke Sunday with a time of two minutes, 18.84 seconds.

Miss Smith, who picked up a gold medal Thursday in the 200-metre individual medley, was second in 2:22.85.

Miss Quirk, winner of the 200-metre individual medley, was second in 2:22.85.

Miss Quirk, winner of the 200-metre butterfly in 2:17 earlier in the Games, had little trouble taking the 100-metre butterfly.

In the women's 400-metre freestyle relay, Miss Smith, Miss Quirk, Miss Oliver and Miss Cook finished second in 4:01.26 behind the U.S. four-some.

In the track and field, Maureen Crowley and Thelma Wright, both of Vancouver, finished second and third respectively in the 1,500 metres.

Debbie Brill of Haney, B.C., wound up second in the high jump with a leap of six feet, two inches.

Canuck Skier Wins

Times News Services
Betsy Clifford of Old Chelsea, Que., outraced a field of top women skiers by a margin of 3.33 seconds Sunday to win an international giant slalom at Elm, Switzerland.

Miss Clifford, 21, swooped through the 54 gates of the three-quarter mile course with a vertical drop of 1,180 feet in one minute, 47.92 seconds.

Cindy Nelson of the United States was second in 1:51.25 and 17-year-old Kathy Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., was third in 1:52.03.

Franz Klammer, a 20-year-old son of peasant parents from the tiny Corinthian village of Mooswald, Austria, snapped an eight-year record Sunday when he won his sixth consecutive World Cup downhill ski race at Innsbruck, Austria.

His time was one minute, 55.78 seconds down the 4,750-foot Patscherkofel Mountain—site of the 1976 Olympic Games skiing competition.

Official world records are not kept in Alpine skiing, but Klammer's achievement was considered a record because no skier ever had won six consecutive downhill races since the start of World Cup competition. The previous best was five, by Jean Claude-Killy of France in 1967.

Bernhard Russi of Switzerland, the defending Olympic champion, finished second in 1:56.27. He was followed by Herbert Plank of Italy in 1:56.61 and his countryman, Gustavo Thoeni, in 1:57.18.

Best Canadian was Dave Irwin of Thunder Bay, Ont., with a sixth-place finish in 1:57.38. Jim Hunter of Calgary was 10th in 1:57.90, Ken Read of Calgary 16th in 1:59.05, Steve Podorski of Toronto 19th in 1:59.20 and Dave Murray of Abbotsford, B.C., 22nd in 1:59.31.

Henri Duvillard of France won his fifth race in eight starts on the international professional skiing tour Sunday with a victory in the slalom at Blue Mountain near Collingwood, Ont.

Hank Kashiwa of Steamboat Springs, Colo., was second, John-Noel Augert of France finished third and Dan Mo Mooney of Squaw Valley, Calif., was fourth.

Paul Carson of Toronto finished fifth—his best showing thus far in the series, and Doug Woodcock of Oshawa was sixth.

At Aspen, Colo., Keith Humphrey of Calgary covered the two runs of Saturday's men's slalom in 107.25 seconds to win the 29th annual Roach Cup of the Canadian-American ski series competition.

Humphrey's time was four-tenths of a second faster than that of Peter Dodge of Saint Johnsbury, Vt., who picked up five points in the over-all Can-Am series standing to take over first place with 135 points.

Tracy Annand of Petawawa, Ont., and Danny Minogue of Montreal emerged Sunday as the leaders in the eastern division of Pontiac Cup ski competitions near Ottawa.

Miss Annand, 17, took both Saturday and Sunday single pole slalom events to earn 50 cup points in the first of four eastern events leading toward a national championship.

Minogue, 19, came back from a fourth place finish Saturday to a second Sunday for 28 cup points.

The western opener scheduled at Banff, Alta., was cancelled this weekend and the first western race now will be held at Kimberley Feb. 19 and 20.

Norwegian skiers finished first in a men's cross-country relay race Sunday at Ramsau, Austria.

Canada, represented by Bert Bullock, 19, of Inuvik, N.W.T., Hans Skinstad, 28, of Devon, Alta., and Ed Day, 25, of Prince George, placed 14th in 1:49:27.98.

Honor for Whipper

TORONTO (CP) — A testimonial dinner honoring Whipper Billy Watson, formerly professional wrestler, will be held here Friday, April 25. The purpose will be to recognize the support he has given to charitable organizations across Canada during the last 25 years, particularly those dealing with crippled children.

Volleyball Downfall

LETHBRIDGE — University of Victoria has its work cut out if it is to win the Canada West University Athletic Association women's volleyball championship.

UVic, first-place finisher in the initial leg of the three-stage tournament in Victoria last November, tied for last place here Saturday after the second round. The final round is scheduled next month in Edmonton.

After losing to Alberta, Calgary and Lethbridge on Friday, UVic downed University of British Columbia 15-10, 15-11 Saturday before losing 15-7, 6-15, 12-15 to Saskatchewan.

Saskatchewan finished with a 5-0 won-lost record followed by Alberta (4-1), UBC and Calgary (2-3) and UVic and Lethbridge (1-4).

AUSSIES SAVED BY LATE RALLY

England, replying to Australia's first-innings score of 304, was two for no wickets at close of play on the second day of the fifth cricket test match Sunday at Adelaide, Australia.

Late batting resistance saved Australia after magnificent bowling by Derek Underwood, England's wet wicket specialist, who took seven wickets.

India, meanwhile, put up a stiff fight Saturday on the third day of the fifth cricket test against the West Indies at Bombay, but it still has a difficult task if it hopes to win the series.

Facing the massive West Indies total of 604 for six declared, Sunil Gavaskar and Eknath Solkar produced India's best partnership of the five tests. Gavaskar's dismissal for 86 five minutes before the close meant a severe setback for India. At 171 for two, India needs 234 more runs to save a follow-on.

Grants to 2 Local Projects In Explorations Program

Two Victoria projects are among 68 grants worth a total of $286,948 awarded across Canada under the Canada Council's explorations program.

Eddythe Hembroff-Schleicher, has been given $3,500 to complete research into the dating of Emily Carr's paintings and sketches and the listing of exhibitions, sketching trips and paintings.

A $2,500 grant has been awarded to Yetta Lees, to explore and record the psychological, emotional and artistic effect of color and texture in the performing arts.

The Explorations program is designed to encourage new forms of expression, communication and public participation in the arts, humanities and social sciences and work on Canada's cultural and historical heritage.

The successful projects were chosen from 219 applications in a competition which closed Sept. 1, 1974.

Results of a third competition, which closed Dec. 1, will be announced in April.

Sugar Price Cut

NEW YORK (AP) — Four of the largest sugar companies in the United States have announced price cuts for their industrial sugar and say the reduction reflected the lower cost of raw sugar.

The price drop by $4 per 100 pounds will be effective immediately, the refiners said.

Amstar Corp., SuCrest Corp. and the National Sugar Refining Co. said they will charge industrial users $49.90 for 100 pounds of extra-fine granulated sugar and $49 for 100 pounds of bulk granulated and No. 2 liquid sugar.

CPC International said it will cut its liquid sugar prices to $49.40 and bulk granulated and No. 2 liquid to $49.

Trainmen on Job

Canadian Press

A Canadian National Railways spokesman said in Montreal today locomotive engineers who walked out Friday have begun returning to work in 15 of 30 affected centres across Canada.

He said some 1,500 of the 2,000 who booked off sick still were off the job today.

He said engineers were returning in the following centres: Moncton, N.B.; Sioux Lookout, Windsor, Sarnia and London, all in Ontario; The Pas and Gillam, Man.; Saskatoon, North Battleford, Humboldt and Prince Albert, Sask.; Jasper, Alta.; Kamloops, B.C.; Prince George and Vancouver.

Walkouts continued in Toronto, Ottawa, Winnipeg, Edmonton and Calgary.

A CN spokesman in Vancouver said priority is being given to restoring freight services in British Columbia and Alberta. Restoration of full passenger services could take several days.

CN announced Sunday it has laid off temporarily 13,000 employees in affected jobs and, if the strike continues, more layoffs could be expected.

The New North America —An Answer for Canada

While you've been out playing and having fun I have been sitting here, brooding over ways to prevent ourselves from being wiped out by the United States of America. Somebody has to worry about these things.

There now seems little doubt that we Canadians are on a collision course with the U.S.A. I expect that the moment of truth will come within the next 50 years though it could well come a whole lot sooner.

One way or the other, voluntarily, on our part, or militarily, on their's, we're going to have to give up what passes as our sovereignty. The Scott Plan may not be the perfect solution. At least it will guarantee us against annihilation.

It's now evident that (1) the United States one day is going to run out of those natural resources that keep a nation going and (2) when they do they'll take any means they have to stay alive, including war.

Let's be very orderly about this and take (1) first. The United States now sees the day when it will simply seize up through the over-use or lack of self-sufficiency of those riches we possess in abundance. More and more they are looking northward for hydro-electric power, for water, timber, minerals, petroleum in its various forms, grains, even land.

Quite apart from the threat of running out of the raw materials that keep the world's most industrialized giant in business there is the equally dreaded prospect of running out of living room.

Over-population is, in fact, the subject of a prophetic new novel by John Hersey called "My Petition For More Space" in which he quotes Saul Bellow: "We are crowded in, packed in, now, and human beings must feel that there is a way out, and that the intellectual power and skill of their own species opens this way."

The way out, obviously, is to harness the resources and open spaces of Canada. The power, obviously, is the mighty, fearsome power of the United States.

We ought to know by now that the United States will use almost any means to maintain that might.

We've seen the evidence that Henry Kissinger, the U.S. Secretary of State, master-minded the coup that brought down the democratic structure of Chile for no other apparent reason but the assumption that the U.S.A. has a God-given right to wipe out any government it doesn't like.

Kissinger is now on the record that the U.S. will use "force" against the Arab nations if the Arabs retail their oil — their oil — in any way that seriously inconveniences the U.S. President Ford wasted no time in shaking his fist in support.

We've seen how this works on a small local scale within the last couple of weeks. When Premier Dave Barrett proposed that we increase our price of natural gas sold in the U.S. it was only a matter of hours until two of the nation's most powerful senators had blown the whistle for Kissinger, the hatchet man, to get cracking.

Force, in the military sense, has always been a second choice for the U.S. in its dealings with Canada. Retaliation, so far, has been the frontal weapon. We know only too well that the U.S. can cripple us hopelessly by punitive embargoes and tariffs in return for any slight wound we may inflict upon them in our own self-interest. The crisis in the British Columbia lumber industry, for example, is entirely a reflection of U.S. conditions.

The problem is further complicated by a growing nationalism within Canada. True, our federal government gives it little except lip service, but there's obviously a burgeoning appetite for complete independence, specifically in the limiting of U.S. ownership of our resources, now said to be a priority as high as two-thirds.

As that is nibbled away, as we increasingly look to conservation and maximum prices for our exports of natural resources, so there will be a growing antagonism in the U.S. In effect, we are the Arabs of the future. If economic relations isn't the answer, force may be the ultimate, inevitable solution.

Given these bare facts the only way out seems to be the old philosophy that if you can't beat 'em, join 'em. Those few people who advocate that Canada join the U.S. are instantly shot down by the Canadian vanity that we're a different breed and that we can, in time, function with true independence. Nothing could be further from the truth. We are hopelessly, completely American. More legitimately, there's a strong feeling that if the United States covered all of this continent (except Mexico and the Central Americas) its imperialist, expansionary goals would be a greater menace to the peace of the world.

Yet one has only to look at a map of North America to realize that the real problem is entirely geographic and this is how the Scott Plan evolved. The problem simply is that North America is divided horizontally when it ought to be divided vertically.

Let's assume, for example, that we created two Americas — West American and East America. We might do this by an arbitrary north-south line that would follow the eastern Manitoba border and then follow a line south through Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas and Louisiana to the Gulf of Mexico. These would be two distinct nations in which Canadians and Americans alike could take their choice.

Each nation would have everything required for economic success, each with a coast-line of excellent ports, each with a tremendous industrial complex, a huge consumer market, a diversity of semi-tropical and Arctic weather, a vast hinterland of great natural resources and available land — in short all of the components of a modern society that would make any confrontation in the future an impossibility.

The Canadian, of course, being largely ignorant of his similarities with the American, might balk at this concept because of his dreams of independence, but at least he would have minority rights which will not exist if the U.S.A. decides, as it eventually will, to gobble up its northern neighbor.

On reflection, I'm sure, even those of us with such foolish, nationalistic feelings will see that this is the only solution. It should bother no one and certainly will not bother me. I'll be living in a quiet cottage in Cornwall, England, if it ever happens.

The Williams family, with 'their' home and car in Sidney

These Two Families Never Met —But Exchanged Homes, Jobs On Opposite Sides of Pacific

By SUSAN RUTAN
Times Staff

Trevor Williams and Chris Harker passed each other somewhere over the Pacific a month ago, and since then have been living in each other's shoes.

Williams, the Australian, is now teaching Harker's English and social studies classes at Parkland secondary school in Sidney.

Harker, the Canadian, is teaching Williams' classes in a high school in Echuca, a small city of 8,000 on the border of New South Wales and Victoria states in Australia.

Williams is living in Harker's home at 2324 Roseberry and driving his Land Rover.

Harker is living in Williams' home and driving his Hillman.

They have never met each other.

They are participants in a new teacher exchange program initiated by the state of Victoria that has sent 36 Australian teachers abroad for a year to Canada and the United States.

Three have come to the Victoria area — Williams to Parkland, Geoff Hinde to Belmont-Fisher secondary, and Max Kent to Mt. Newton junior secondary school.

All will stay until next January, when they and their Canadian counterparts will switch places again.

Williams' first reaction to his new home and job is good, except for the flu that struck him shortly after arriving on Dec. 27.

He, his wife Lorraine and three sons were delighted to see their first snow, and are impressed with B.C. forests and the view of the Olympics. And they're gradually getting used to driving on the right side of the road.

One thing Williams and Harker do retain is their own salaries, but the Williams are managing even though they find the cost of living higher here than back home.

They've noticed high beef prices and the astronomical price of sugar in particular.

But many of the things Williams sees and hears in Canada are similar to life in Australia.

"I don't feel that I'm in a foreign country," he said.

All the issues of inflation, recession, unemployment, aboriginal rights, American investment in resource industries are as alive in Australia as they are in Canada, he said.

Inflation in Australia has jumped from 3 per cent a year to 16 per cent in the past two years, he said.

Unemployment is at 2 per cent, which for Australia is very high.

The Williams' oldest son, five-year-old Philip, would normally be starting school in February in Echuca, but will have to wait here till September.

However, he'll get a lot out of being in Canada for a year, his father said.

Exchange teaching has been going on for many years, and each year usually brings a few teachers from Commonwealth countries to Victoria.

Besides the three Australians, two British teachers have been at Belmont-Fisher secondary since September. Pat Findlayson is teaching social studies, John Adams-Lewis teaching shops.

Exchange teachers and Victoria teachers who have been on exchange can join the local exchange teachers' club, which holds social functions each month.

Former Athlete Ernie Peden Dead at 65

Former Victoria athlete and businessman Ernest Edward (Ernie) Peden died Sunday at the age of 65 in Royal Jubilee Hospital after a long illness.

A professional agriculturist, Peden was president of the family firm of Scott and Peden Ltd., a pioneer Victoria feed and grain firm, for nearly 20 years until his retirement and sale of the company in 1967.

Born in Victoria, he graduated from the University of British Columbia with a masters degree in agriculture, and was a member of Sigma Tau Upsilon fraternity.

Captain and centre of the varsity football team during his senior year at UBC, Peden also won trophies in swimming, diving, gymnastics, bicycle racing and golf.

He placed second in breaststroke swimming and third in diving in national trials held to select the Canadian swimming and diving team for the 1932 Olympic Games, and was chosen for the team.

However, he chose marriage over participation in the games at Los Angeles. Peden was married to Mrs. Hugh Tyrrell of Victoria; his daughter Valerie Burgess of Nelson; sons Alex of Victoria and Donald of Saskatoon; sisters Eleanor of Sidney and Anna of Lacey; and brothers William (Torchy) of Northbrook, Ill. and Douglas of Victoria.

Funeral will be Thursday at 4 p.m. in McCall Bros. chapel, 1400 Vancouver St. Rev. William Van Druten officiating.

He served a term as president of the Canadian Feed

Anne-Marie Wiat's drawings have a delicate, ethereal kind of charm, like "half-remembered illustrations from The Water Babies."

The 24-year-old French citizen has that kind of ambition, to become a specialist in illustrating books for children.

But making a living as an illustrator "seems to be hard over here. I hope it will be possible because I like Victoria."

She speaks with Far Eastern gentleness, and is too modest to call herself an illustrator, insisting she is still learning her skill despite her training in France including a final year of study in Paris.

Anne-Marie has done some TV commercial cartoon work, for Canavest in Vancouver and Crawley Films in Ottawa, and some of the TV film cartoon feature, Wait Until Your Father Comes Home.

At present she is completing a series of page-size watercolor-line drawings for a collection of stories having religious themes for children and adults.

The book by Nelson Miller includes Christian and Buddhist sources and will be published in Vancouver for Banyan Book Store.

Anne-Marie's work as an illustrator began about a year ago, and if she has a goal—she had to consider the question for a moment when asked—"it is to perfect my drawings. That may not be practical, but I want to be a specialist in book illustration. I could be happy doing children's books, but not exclusively."

Resident of Canada since December, 1970, Anne-Marie wants to become a citizen. This country, she said, is young and promises more than France. "It needs young people, has more resources and younger people with a more open approach (bound by) fewer traditions."

"In Paris there is so much competition you would have to compromise your ideals, and I think in this country I would have more chance and more peace."

She has gone home to her parents each year since landing in Canada, which was to have been only a Christmas visit, and she does miss the art atmosphere of Paris, with its Louvre and hundreds of smaller galleries.

Some so-called paintings she has seen hung in Canadian galleries she agrees are fraudulent: like the rectangle evenly divided horizontally into red and white halves, which she saw in Ontario. Thus far she has not had an opportunity to study local galleries.

Anne-Marie said she is still trying to find her own style and does not quarrel with the suggestion that it lies somewhere between realism and impressionism.

"I've been told my lines are very feminine in style, lacking boldness or energy of temperament. . . . It seems people are fed up with the aggressive style."

Her reserved approach to art is perhaps a reflection of a quiet, cheerful and friendly personality.

Although raised from the age of five in France, Anne-Marie was born in Hongay, Indochina, before it became North Vietnam. Her mother is Vietnamese and Anne-Marie has the attractive olive skin and jet black hair of the Orient. A sister Jacqueline, one year younger, also lives in Victoria, the wife of a Toronto carpenter working at Open Space.

Their father was an adventurer who left France for the colony shortly after his release from a German prison camp at the end of the Second World War. After the fall of the French regime in Indochina at the Battle of Dien Bien Phu, the Wiarts made their home in Tours.

Provincial highway safety engineer Jack Lisman has recommended a sidewalk be built on Jacklin Road to make it safer for pedestrians.

But Lisman and other highway department officials confirmed today the provincial government does not usually build sidewalks in unorganized areas.

Municipal or other local governments are usually responsible for building curbs and sidewalks, said the official, and Lisman's recommendation will therefore probably be passed on to the Capital Regional District.

Lisman said he initially recommended repainting the crosswalk near Belmont-the task in future of finding replacements when a dentist who has set up practice there wants to move on.

That sort of help shifts the burdens which have hampered dentists in the past from settling in places like the Queen Charlottes. The college hopes it will create a climate eventually attracting dentists to the traditional private practice.

Meanwhile, about 50 dentists in Lower Vancouver Island have signed up to man the first clinic at Massett in turn, probably two weeks at a time, said Martin. Specialists have indicated they are willing to take a turn too.

Massett's dental clinic is likely to open for business in March.

on the Queen Charlottes stood out. Both dentists have visited and worked on the Charlottes several times in recent months.

Howland says the dentists have shown a lot of energy, initiative and sincerity in tackling the problem.

But it's been a co-operative effort, says Vicki Sexsmith, the council's chairperson and a representative from Massett. Local people will help amortize equipping costs and there have been pledges from the band councils, for example.

Hicks said the college is guaranteeing the remaining money needed to get the dental clinics started, providing the initial staffing with a rotating series of dentist volunteers and is ready to take on

The health and human resources council now organized on the Queen Charlottes is funded by the provincial government but made up of local residents, explains its co-ordinator, Jonathan Howland.

It wants to set up four community health centres and eventually have dental clinics as a part of each. So last June the council got in touch with the dental college, the organization representing B.C.'s 1,300 dentists.

The college set up a two-man committee, Victoria dentists James Martin and W. D. McDougall, and Martin said that in their survey of needs in isolated areas the problem

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I was in the Detroit airport when I read the item in your column about the husband who blew his stack because his wife purchased an overpriced pants suit.

Grannies in pants suits dandered by.

Everything was in pants: males, females, and debatables. A courting penguin would have been hard put to decide where to drop the pebble in the standardized parade of bulging bellies and butts.

Stewardesses in britches walked by. (Why don't they hire bona fide boys in the first place?) No woman looks good in pants. Some only look worse than others. And that goes for Marlene in her tuxedo, too.

It has been said the success of a woman's costume is directly proportional to arousal.

of a man's desire to tear it off her. The pants mania thus confirms the suspicion that American women dress to impress other women — not men.

Pants on wives should be declared valid grounds for uncontested divorce, with reciprocal privilege in the case of mini skirts and hot pants on husbands.

I just had to tell someone. — Mel in Belleville.

DEAR MEL: I disagree. Some women look great in pants, but some look better than others. Granted, some women in slacks should not turn their backs, but the same can be said of some men.

I have had news for men who hate pants on women. You are going to be seeing more and more of ladies' pants, and less and less of ladies' legs. Why? Because they're so comfortable, that's why!

DEAR ABBY: My husband has been dead for 15 years, but I still consider myself to be MRS. JOHN JACKSON.

My problem is: People still address mail (and especially Christmas cards) to MRS. JUNE JACKSON. This really makes me angry because it is

Pants Just Don't Leave 'Em Panting

My understanding that until I marry again, I am MRS. JOHN JACKSON.

My sister-in-law, who thinks she knows it all, told me that since John is not living, there is no MRS. JOHN JACKSON. Am I right? Or did women's lib change all that? — Who Am I?

DEAR WHO: Socially, you are still Mrs. John Jackson. Don't blame women's lib for your sister-in-law's ignorance.

DEAR ABBY: That letter about the red hair reminded me of my own situation.

All during my childhood my grandmother used to tell me how much she hated red hair. After I was married and expecting my first baby I had two fears. One was that I would have twins. (They run in both families.) The other was that I'd have a red-haired baby. (My father-in-law was red-headed.)

When they told me I had a red-headed baby girl I thought they were kidding me, but when I saw that wicked, crying bundle with bright red hair I knew they were serious. I was so thankful that she had ten little fingers and ten little toes and was perfect in every way, I forgot about her hair.

Five years later I had a red-headed baby boy. He was perfectly healthy, too, which was cause for rejoice.

Both my children are stand-outs because of their red hair, and I suspect that people who "hate" redheads are secretly jealous — D.M. in Gretna, La.

DEAR ABBY: So the Number One complaint of husbands is, "My wife nags me!" Well, put me down as one husband whose wife nags him — and he's glad of it. Thank God she nags me. It shows she loves me.

I kept putting off going to the doctor to get a checkup, and she finally nagged me into going. The doc said I had to lose 25 pounds, and I kept putting off going on a diet, but my wife nagged me until I went to Weight Watchers. God love her. I finally went — and I lost 32 pounds! And I'm maintaining that weight.

Now my wife is nagging me to see a lawyer and have a will made. I haven't done it yet, but I hope she doesn't quit nagging me before I get hit by a bus.

So, Abby, old girl, please tell your readers that if a wife doesn't nag her husband, she doesn't really love him. Sign me... — Nagged in Tucson

'BOTTOMS ARE TOPS' —WOMEN

LOS ANGELES (AP) —

"Bottoms are tops. Slim, trim, curved ones are what women notice," says the president of Man Watchers Inc., an organization devoted to the study of the male physique.

Suzi Mallory says that a survey of her members shows women notice men's buttocks more than any other male physical characteristic. The next most-noticed aspects of the male physique are chests, hands and posture, she says.

Man Watchers' list of the 10 most beautiful men for 1974 is headed by actor Burt Reynolds, voted tops by organization members for his "animal magnetism, masculinity, sense of humor and great looks from top to bottom."

Others on the list are actor Alan Alda, "low-key naturalness and subtle sensitivity;" actor Jack Nicholson, "killer smile and cobra eyes;" tennis star John Newcombe, "exciting body language;" actor Cleavon Little, "satin-smooth bearing and catlike elegance;" actor Robert Redford, "traditionally handsome in the classic style."

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Commonly we physicians recognize a little brain injury, such as can be due to a little stroke, when we see that the patient's face is much duller than it should be for his position in life, and that his formerly smooth handwriting has changed, and has come to resemble something like the cutting edge of an old saw. In many cases, I make the diagnosis when I learn that the man's bank asked him to give them a new signature for his checks.

As I say in my book, "Little Strokes," published in 1966, a series of little strokes is probably one of the most common diseases of man and such brain injury has most to do with producing aging in millions of elderly people. As a sweet old lady used to say every time she had a little stroke, "Death is taking little bites of me."

In most cases the effects of a little stroke are transient.

There will be perhaps 30 seconds of marked and frightening dizziness; after that, some loss of memory, loss of steadiness on the person's feet, a loss in ability, and perhaps a little slowing-up. In many cases, the man can have 20 or 30 little strokes before they pull him down and make it impossible for him to continue with his work.

Rarely, a person with a little stroke will fall out of his chair; rarely he will be unable to talk for a few seconds or minutes; rarely he'll have a brief spell of weakness in some muscle or a brief spell of numbness of a hand or arm.

After some little strokes, some men will just sit in their office all day and get nothing done. Some men will lose their interest in bathing, shaving, getting dressed, or keeping their clothes clean. Many a time I have made a diagnosis of a little stroke minute I saw an eminent man with gray on his coat. In a few cases, a man's secretary has told me that one day as her boss was dictating a letter, he suddenly started to talk gibberish, without realizing what he was doing.

On rare occasions, when a man has a severe little stroke in his sleep, he wakes terribly changed. I remember well the president of a bank who woke one morning and, without giving his wife any explanation, did not go to work. He was dull and greatly changed mentally, and he never went back into the bank again. Another very capable president of a big corporation woke one morning so changed that, even though he kept going to his office every day, he never could do anything there.

What is sad is that none of us physicians were taught at college that we are not likely ever to get a history of little strokes from a patient who is too dull to realize what has happened to him, or when he doesn't remember that disaster came suddenly one day with a terribly dizzy spell, or that one day he fell on the floor while shaving.

There are four quick and sure ways of diagnosing a little stroke: (1) by noting that the patient is not as bright as he should be for his occupation; (2) by noting that he is too dull to give much of a history; (3) by noting that he is not as well dressed and clean as he should be; (4) by asking his wife if a terrible change suddenly came over him. The physician who never asks the spouse what happened will rarely make the diagnosis of a little stroke.

Also, the physician who does not note that the president of a large company sitting there before him, looks like a laborer, will never diagnose a little stroke.

What is sad is that, when I see a man with typical little strokes, I learn from his wife that he has seen 8 or 10 physicians or been to numerous clinics, and the correct diagnosis was not made. Perhaps some of the physicians saw what was wrong but did not care to make such an unpleasant diagnosis. The word "stroke" has bad connotations because it suggests that God struck the man down, and hence must have been angry with him. That is why today, although in medical journals I find articles on little strokes, the articles are on "brief episodes of cerebral ischemia" (cerebral meaning the brain, and "ischemia," lack of blood.) I use the words "little strokes" because I want everyone to understand this condition.

At last today there is more hope for the patients dullest with a little stroke. I read that oxygen and especially oxygen under a little pressure, is helping many people and clearing away their dullness.

WHEELS

By MICHAEL LAMM

Dear Mike: About 30 days ago, I bought a 1972 Capri 2000 coupe. The odometer showed about 30,000 miles, and the car ran fine, with no noises. Now, for the last couple of days, I've noticed a drumming sound from the engine when accelerating. This noise is getting louder. Since I bought the car used from a private party, there's no guarantee. I took it to the local Lincoln-Mercury dealer, and the mechanic thought the sound might be loose connecting rod bearing or flat crankshaft. He couldn't tell me for sure without taking the engine apart. If so, the repair will come to about $400. I'm shocked and can't believe the car would need such an expensive repair so soon. What else could cause a similar noise — something cheaper, I hope. — Frantic

Dear Mike: I bought a 1971 Torino sedan three weeks ago. The odometer said 46,000 miles and when I asked the salesman whether this was the actual mileage, he assured me it was. But now I have reason to believe this car has been driven much farther — things I hadn't noticed before, like very worn pedal pads, new carpeting front and rear, and considerable oil consumption at normal freeway speeds. How can I find out this car's true mileage, and do I have any recourse with the dealer if he lied. — Skeptic

Dear Skeptic: First, the law now forbids rolling back an odometer. Second, you could ask the dealer to give you the name and address of a car's previous owner. You might ask your dealer to give you the former owner's name, because it might have been the owner who turned back the odometer (if, indeed, it is turned back). Often it's not the dealer who rolls back mileage. In any case, despite several new laws aimed at protecting the used-car buyer, he's still just as much on his own as ever.

A good mechanic can usually tell a bad bearing by the sound it makes. Get some more opinions. Lots of things make drumming noises on acceleration.

What causes my 1969 Dodge Dart to make a whistling sound at 55 mph? It's loud enough to be noticed by other cars as they pass. — Whistling Billy

Dear Billy: It's hard to say, but the most common whistles are caused by wind passing through or past seams in the body — for instance between the hood and fenders. You might try covering body seams and cracks with masking tape to see if the whistle goes away. If it does, you can pinpoint the whistle by removing one section of tape at a time. But the whistle might also be caused by rotating parts in the engine compartment (the fan, for instance) or by a vacuum leak in the intake system.

Q. Do you have any directions for making hot pads from clothesline? On television, I once saw a group of senior citizens making them. — Mrs. Christine E. Remick.

A. There are several ways to coil a rope hot pad. A glued pad is simply a coiled circle made by winding the rope around itself. As you wind, squeeze white glue (in applicator-tip bottle) between the rope coils. Cut the end and pin it to the circle of rope. Work on wax paper. Place a sheet of wax paper over the coil and weigh down with a book until dry.

A wired pad has eight lengths of wire attached to one end. Start to wind the wire end in a circle. Every two wires extend outward, equidistant from each other, cutting the pad in four pie wedges. As you wind the rope, twist two wires around the coiling rope, by knotting the rope to the previous ring. Glue the end to the finished pad.

Crochet an oval cover to fit over the soap (double crocheted). To make the cover curve, every so often crochet two stitches at once. After you pass the sides of the soap, continue to crochet, decreasing stitches until you can slip the soap snugly into the cover. A single crochet will make the cup curve naturally. If too much cup is formed, increase the stitches. The reverse is done if cup is too small.

The neck is a thick pipe cleaner or several thin pipe cleaners twisted together. Insert in the stitches. The wings are gathered netting sewed to both sides. Sprinkle with cologne. — Mrs. Philip Gomez

Time to Get Ready For Spring Clothes

This is the eleventh in a series of 15 articles in which Josephine Lowman, author of WHY GROW OLD? and leading authority on health and beauty, tells you exactly what to do to lose 20 pounds in eight weeks. You may want to save these menus and exercises to refer back to during the eight-week period.

Do the spring clothes that are already appearing in stores make you think of robins in a snow storm? They certainly are reminders that the birds will soon be flying and you will be buying your spring clothes!

Why not make shopping a real pleasure this year? There is nothing more frustrating than trying on clothes when one is overweight. Even eight or ten pounds too many can make the prettiest garment look like a rag.

This is the fourth week of my eight week Beauty Improvement Plan, (BIP). Those of you who are following this series have been given lots of helpful information, ten exercises and slimming menus for nine days. If you have not started BIP there is still time between now and spring to lose from 15 to 20 pounds or streamline any out of line measurements.

From here on you will be planning your own reducing menus. Not only the amount you eat but WHAT you eat is always important. This is especially vital when your food intake is somewhat curtailed. There simply are not enough calories left for non-essential foods after meeting the requirements of good nutrition.

Most important, always include foods, daily, from the four food groups. These are: 1. Dairy products, milk, cheese, yogurt. 2. Fruits and vegetables. 3. Meat, eggs, seafood, fish and poultry. 4. Whole grain products, breads and cereals. The reason some women look worn and older after losing weight rather than fresh and younger is because they did not eat correctly during their reducing program.

Here are some general suggestions that will aid in your determination to improve your appearance and your health. Substitute skim or powdered fat-free milk for whole milk. This saves you about 80 calories a glass. You will find that plain yogurt made with skim milk can often be substituted for sour cream in recipes. If you buy it to eat be sure it is the plain yogurt.

Make it a habit to eat fresh fruit or waterpacked fruit instead of dessert. Buy lean meat and have the fat removed before it is ground for meat patties. Eat more chicken and fish than meat. They are lower in fat content and will be good for your figure, health and pocketbook.

Use commercial low-calorie salad dressings or make your own using tomato juice and herbs. Cut down on butter or margarine. Avoid fried foods. Substitute consommé for gravy. Remove visible fat from meat before cooking it.

The way you prepare food makes a tremendous difference in calorie count. The most innocent items can be turned into calorie terrorists when they are fried, or seasoned with cream or greasy sauces or smothered with butter or sugar. The rule is, bake or broil. Use a roasting rack when cooking a roast so that the fat drips into the pan while cooking. Make a stew to eat before you are going to eat it. The fat will harden overnight in the refrigerator and can be removed. Remember always how wonderful herbs are for seasoning.

Actually your reducing experience should introduce you to a new style in food habits. The above suggestions will promote good health as well as a lovely figure and are not really hardships. Habit will soon take over and you will not miss the rich, fat and fattening foods you once craved.

If you missed some of this series and want to be clued in for a late start you may want my BIP Kit. This has complete directions, a calorie chart, slimming menus for two weeks, spot reducing exercises, a height and weight chart and a wall chart on which you can plot your progress and watch your weight line rise as your weight line drops. If you want the Kit send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed stamped envelope with your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of the Times.

MUCH HIDDEN IN OUR SPEECH

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — Speech is the blueprint of the personality, a Menninger Foundation psychologist says.

Everyone knows our voices sometimes give us away by stuttering, mumbling or getting suddenly loud when we're nervous or frightened.

But Dr. Clyde Rousey says there's much more hidden in our ordinary speech: our childhood anxieties, feelings about our parents, how competitive we are, whether we're likely to commit suicide, drink too much or have a heart attack.

Rousey, who is both a psychologist and a speech pathologist, has spent 14 years developing and refining a simple eight-minute speech test, which he says works as surely as the more complicated traditional psychological tests to reveal personality traits and problems.

"The test consists of repeating about 50 words which give all the various sounds made," Rousey explained in an interview. "Then these sounds are analyzed phonetically and broken down into their component sounds, filtering out ethnic and regional variations."

The test also includes singing up and down the scale to record vowel sounds, swallowing and listening to certain words and sounds and describing how you hear them.

The person who analyzes the test results looks for certain tell-tale slips of speech, such as a whistling sound on the letter "S," or mispronunciations of sounds like "L," "TH" or "P." Such speech slips are different from so-called Freudian slips of the tongue, where one word is substituted for another.

Rousey is reluctant to tell the layman how certain sounds and slips of speech relate to particular mental traits for fear that an oversimplified understanding will lead people to interpret their own or other's speech inaccurately.

But he gave an example from recent history, which also demonstrates the potential value of speech analysis for historians.

When John F. Kennedy was campaigning for president in 1960, his voice was filled with whistling "S" sounds, particularly when facing the emotional issue of his religion, Rousey said.

The theory behind speech analysis is that each person goes through various stages of psychological development as he is growing up, and in each stage certain speech sounds are mastered. If a person passes through a development stage without resolving the inner conflicts associated with it, his incorrect pronunciation of sounds learned during that period will betray the problem.

For example, Rousey said, during the stage when a child is learning assertive, masculine behavior, he should also be learning the "TH" sound. A child who has had problems relating to his father and learning about the father's masculine role will also have trouble pronouncing the "TH."

Quick Batter Bread Simple and Certain family

By HILDA BEASTALL

There must be hundreds of recipes published every year for making bread. Some are complicated and involve much time; some are for fancy breads, too sweet for enjoying with simple meals, but perfect for making into dessert by adding fresh fruits.

Quick Batter Bread is one recipe which bears repeating every six months to reach the new crop of homemakers interested in good food prepared at home. It is one I know to be useful for the busiest homemaker — man or woman, young or older than young. The three and a quarter cups of mixed flours are quickly and easily handled and there is only one rising period, which can be used in mixing up a batch of cookies to bake after the bread comes out.

Two hours is the time lapse from beginning to the taking out of the fragrant bread.

This recipe is simplified for beginners who have never tried breadmaking. In fact it isn't even necessary to make conventional breads, loaves from this mixture.

Sometimes I make one small loaf, eight medium buns (in muffin pans) and 12 small buns (also in muffin pans).

Because this is a Batter Bread recipe, it makes a soft dough, not suited to kneading, rolling, and shaping into braids or for filled and rolled breads.

The batter can of course be spooned into one large mould pan, to give a fancy shape for a special occasion or for slicing with salads or soups. It takes no longer to prepare and you might as well do something different occasionally with an old recipe.

Since the men are more imaginative cooks than women (we must admit all the renowned chefs are men) it is quite likely they will take this simple beginners recipe as a base for other creations. If they do, I would like to hear about them, if still concocted from basically simple ingredients and not with vast quantities of sugar and fat, both overused by average Canadians.

QUICK BATTER BREAD

- 1/4 cup warm water
- 1 tsp demerara sugar
- 1 tsp granular yeast OR 1 pkt.
- 2 tbsp soft margarine
- 1 tsp demerara sugar OR 1 tsp dark molasses
- 1 tsp salt
- 1 (generous) cup hot water

One-third cup skim milk powder
1 egg
1 1/2 cup wholewheat flour
1/4 cup soya flour
1 1/2 cup unbleached flour
Measure warm water into large warm mixing bowl. Stir in teaspoon sugar and dissolve. Sprinkle yeast on surface and let stand 10 minutes until smooth.

Meanwhile in small bowl, measure margarine, sugar and salt. Add hot water and milk powder; stir until all dissolved and cooled to same temperature as yeast mixture.

Add the egg; beat with wooden spoon. Then add the egg-margarine mixture to the yeast mixture in large bowl, mixing well.

Measure the flours into another bowl, add half the flour mixture to the liquid, beating well with spoon as you add until smooth.

Add remaining flour mixture, beating as well as possible. The dough will be a stiff batter, though quite moist.

Grease the pans very well. Spoon in the batter having the pans two-thirds filled to allow for rising.

Set to rise in a warm place out of draught, between 85 and 95 degs. F. for about one hour or until level with rims of pans.

Have oven preheated to a point just less than hot, about 375 degs. A small loaf may take 30 minutes; the buns in pans about 25 minutes. Crust should be an appetizing brown. Don't scorch.

Test for "doneness" by tapping the crust of bread or rolls with knuckles — a hollow sound indicates perfect cooking.

Remove from pans at once and cool on wire rack to allow steam to escape.

These breads and rolls are delicious when fresh and warm, certainly not hard to digest as we were led to believe. They may be kept for future use after thorough cooling, by wrapping in film or plastic bag to keep in refrigerator freezer for a few weeks.

But why not make a habit of baking a batch every week even though you have no expectation of making your entire bread requirements? This Quick Batter Bread is lovely at any meal with anything from soups to salads, to cheese and homemade jellies.

Chequeless Society Being Checked Out

By LEONARD SLOANE

NEW YORK (NYT) — the "chequeless society," long a computer man's dream, has been moving close to development in recent years with the introduction of new processes.

One of the newest of these processes is the Pay By Phone system instituted last fall by two U.S. savings banks. Customers who open special accounts can call in their payments to co-operating merchants, utilities and other organizations through these banks — without writing a cheque or a negotiated order of withdrawal.

Approval of state banking departments is necessary before such a system can be put into effect. Pay By Phone has been approved by the regulatory authorities in Minnesota and in Connecticut on a test basis.

The system is owned by Telephone Computer Services, a company owned principally by seven savings banks. Two of them are those currently using it: the People's Savings Bank in Bridgeport, Conn. and the Farmers and Mechanics Savings Bank in Minneapolis.

The others — the New York Bank for Savings in New York City, Buffalo Savings Bank, Syracuse Savings Bank, Community Savings Bank in Rochester, N.Y., and Washington Mutual Savings Bank in Seattle — have not instituted Pay By Phone yet. But their ownership obviously indicates a strong interest in this aspect of the electronic funds transfer operation planned for the not-too-distant future.

At People's, the system operates manually after a depositor opens a separate interest-bearing account and is given, in addition to an account number a code number. The depositor can then pay bills via the telephone to about 40 local and national companies that have agreed to participate.

Tunnel Collapses

CALCUTTA, India (CP) —

At least 13 persons died when a tunnel under construction at Lok Tak hydroelectric project near here caved in Saturday. Five victims were located Saturday and eight more bodies were unearthed from the debris Sunday as rescue operations continued, Agence France-Presse said.

'TIL DEATH' IN VOWS PUZZLE

By ELEANOR BLAU

NEW YORK (NYT) — "Til death," repeated the guest speaker, recalling part of the marriage vows. "What kind of death? Physical? Or is death of the commitment between the couple just as valid?"

Rev. Harry Untereiner, director of campus ministry at Fordham University, was addressing an empathetic audience — some 20 Roman Catholic men and women whose marriages, they felt, had died, and who were seeking or recuperating from civil divorce.

They sat in a circle on pew benches in the rectory of St. Paul the Apostle Church here and talked a little about loneliness. A tall, youngish man with a bushy moustache said a friend had provided solace. An older woman in a brown slacks suit across the room declared, "Close friends! They think you're a leper."

They talked about individual freedom and about church authority, which rules out Catholic divorce. They argued whether suffering was God's will.

The group, formed last June, is one of a growing number of divorced Catholic groups that have sprung up throughout the U.S. in the last few years as civil divorce among Catholics has increased, as it has among non-Catholics. They now number three dozen and are "spreading like brush fire," according to Rev. James J. Young, adviser to the most active of the groups, in Boston, and co-director of the Paulist center there.

Mobile Home Legislation Under Study

KELOWNA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Philip Young said Saturday a consumer services department task force is investigating the problems of mobile home buyers to prepare legislation.

She said current legislation protecting mobile home buyers is spread throughout six provincial departments and she hopes the new legislation will deal solely with mobile homes.

The minister said the attitudes in the industry are 35 years old and are no longer valid because one of every five homes bought in B.C. is a mobile home.

that six to seven million of the 48 million Catholics in the U.S. now are divorced. Of these, he says, some three million have remarried, although this deprives them, officially at least, of the right to receive communion.

Under church law, marriage can be dissolved if it has not been physically consummated or if one of the spouses was not baptized.

Marriage can be annulled for a variety of reasons that presume that, in effect, no true marriage took place: if, for example, one of the parties already was married or lacked "due discretion" that is, maturity necessary for understanding and fulfilling the responsibilities of marriage.

This last ground has been interpreted more broadly in recent years and is the basis on which marriage tribunals grant most annulments.

Msr. Stephen Kelleher, who was presiding judge of the marriage court in the New York Archdiocese until he publicly criticized the church's procedures on marriage cases in 1968, said that more and more Catholics are spurning annulment as a "sham."

"I feel my marriage was very valid," says Jerry Raffo, a 39-year-old hotel salesman who attends a divorced Catholic group in Berkeley, Calif. "We changed and things changed, but when we entered into that contract, we knew as much as anybody knows. It would be really hypocritical to get that annulled."

In the late 1960's, a number of groups were formed for men or women, separately, to cope with being single again. Remarriage for the most part was not discussed.

Then, in 1972, the Boston group was formed by men and women, who increasingly questioned church teaching and spoke out for change to allow the blessing of second marriages.

A national conference of 300 divorced Catholics in Boston last October unanimously approved resolutions urging "amnesty" for divorced and remarried Catholics and a change in church teaching to permit divorce and remarriage.

Not all the divorced Catholic groups are unanimous about the issue.

In Birmingham, Mich., for example, Rev. Larry Petke reports a "wide range" of opinion among some 80 members of a group there, with some older divorced Catholics in particular ruling out remarriage because they have been taught it would be sinful.

What the groups seem to have in common is mutual support.

Some theologians say that the sacraments, including communion, can be open to divorced, remarried Catholics, as they are to others considered to have sinned, without necessarily affecting the church position on marriage.

Others in the church have called for widened annulment grounds.

Time to Get Ready For Spring Clothes

This is the eleventh in a series of 13 articles in which Josephine Lowman, author of WHY GROW OLD? and leading authority on health and beauty, tells you exactly what to do to lose 20 pounds in eight weeks. You may want to save these menus and exercises to refer back to during the eight-week period.

Do the spring clothes that are already appearing in stores make you think of robins in a snow storm? They certainly are reminders that the birds will soon be flying and you will be buying your spring clothes!

Why not make shopping a real pleasure this year? There is nothing more frustrating than trying on clothes when one is overweight. Even eight or ten pounds too many can make the prettiest garment look like a rag.

This is the fourth week of my eight week Beauty Improvement Plan, (BIP). Those of you who are following this series have been given lots of helpful information, ten exercises and slimming menus for nine days. If you have not started BIP there is still time between now and spring to lose from 15 to 20 pounds or streamline any out of line measurements.

From here on you will be planning your own reducing menus. Not only the amount you eat but WHAT you eat is always important. This is especially vital when your food intake is somewhat curtailed. These simply are not enough calories left for non-essential foods after meeting the requirements of good nutrition.

Most important, always include foods, daily, from the four food groups. These are: 1. Dairy products, milk, cheese, yogurt. 2. Fruits and vegetables. 3. Meat, eggs, seafood, fish and poultry. 4. Whole grain products, breads and cereals. The reason some women look worn and older after losing weight rather than fresh and younger is because they did not eat correctly during their reducing program.

Here are some general suggestions that will aid you in your determination to improve your appearance and your health. Substitute skim or powdered fat-free milk for stead of dessert. Buy lean meat and have the fat removed before it is ground for meat patties. Eat more chicken and fish than meat. They are lower in fat content and will be good for your figure, health and pocketbook.

Use commercial low-calorie salad dressings or make your own using tomato juice and herbs. Cut down on butter or margarine. Avoid fried foods. Substitute consommé for gravy. Remove visible fat from meat before cooking it.

The way you prepare food makes a tremendous difference in calorie count. The most innocent items can be turned into calorie terrors when they are fried, or seasoned with cream or greasy sauces or smothered with butter or sugar. The rule is, bake or broil. Use a roasting rack when cooking a roast so that the fat drips into the pan while cooking. Make a stew the day before you are going to eat it. The fat will harden overnight in the refrigerator and can be removed. Remember always how wonderful herbs are for seasoning.

Actually your reducing experience should introduce you to a new style in food habits.

The above suggestions will promote good health as well as a lovely figure and are not really hardships. Habit will soon take over and you will not miss the rich, fat and fattening foods you once craved. If you missed some of this series and want to be clued in for a late start you may want my BIP Kit. This has complete directions, a calorie chart, slimming menus for two weeks, spot reducing exercises, a height and weight chart and a wall chart on which you can plot your progress and watch your beauty line rise as your weight line drops. If you want the Kit send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed stamped envelope with your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of the Times.

whole milk. This saves you about 80 calories a glass. You will find that plain yogurt made with skim milk can often be substituted for sour cream in recipes. If you buy it to eat be sure it is the plain yogurt.

Make it a habit to eat fresh fruit or waterpacked fruit in-

'TIL DEATH' IN VOWS PUZZLE

By ELEANOR BLAU

NEW YORK (NYT) — "Til death," repeated the guest speaker, receding part of the marriage vow. "What kind of death? Physical? Or is death of the commitment between the couple just as valid?"

Rev. Harry Untereiner, director of campus ministry at Fordham University, was addressing an empathetic audience — some 20 Roman Catholic men and women whose marriages, they felt, had died and who were seeking or recuperating from civil divorce.

They sat in a circle on pew benches in the rectory of St. Paul the Apostle Church here and talked a little about loneliness. A tall, youngish man with a bushy mustache said a friend had provided solace. An older woman in a brown slacks suit across the room declared, "Close friends! They think you're a leper."

They talked about individual freedom and about church authority, which rules out Catholic divorce. They argued whether suffering was God's will.

The group, formed last June, is one of a growing number of divorced Catholics groups that have sprung up throughout the U.S. in the last few years as civil divorce among Catholics has increased, as it has among non-Catholics. They now number three dozen and are "spreading like brush fire," according to Rev. James J. Young, adviser to the most active of the groups, in Boston, and co-director of the Paulist center there.

Father Young estimates that six to seven million of the 48 million Catholics in the U.S. now are divorced. Of these, he says, some three million have remarried, although this deprives them, officially at least, of the right to receive communion.

Under church law, marriage can be dissolved if it has not been physically consummated or if one of the spouses was not baptized.

Marriage can be annulled for a variety of reasons that presume that, in effect, no true marriage took place: if, for example, one of the pair already was married or lacked "due discretion" that is, maturity necessary for understanding and fulfilling the responsibilities of marriage.

This last ground has been interpreted more broadly in recent years and is the basis on which marriage tribunals grant most annulments. Msgr. ## MUCH HIDDEN IN OUR SPEECH

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — Speech is the blueprint of the personality, a Menninger Foundation psychologist says.

Everyone knows our voices sometimes give us away by stuttering, mumbling or getting suddenly loud when we're nervous or frightened.

But Dr. Clyde Rousey says there's much more hidden in our ordinary speech: our childhood anxieties, feelings about our parents, how competitive we are, whether we're likely to commit suicide, drink too much or have a heart attack.

Rousey, who is both a psychologist and a speech pathologist, has spent 14 years developing and refining a simple eight-minute speech test, which he says works as surely as the more complicated traditional psychological tests to reveal personality traits and problems.

"The test consists of repeating about 50 words which give all the various sounds made," Rousey explained in an interview. "Then these sounds are analyzed phonetically and broken down into their component sounds, filtering out ethnic and regional variations."

The test also includes singing up and down the scale to record vowel sounds, swallowing and listening to certain words and sounds and describing how you hear them.

The person who analyzes the test results looks for certain tell-tale slips of speech, such as a whistling sound on the letter "S," or mispronunciations of sounds like "L," "TH" or "P." Such speech slips are different from so-called Freudian slips of the tongue, where one word is substituted for another.

Rousey is reluctant to tell the layman how certain sounds and slips of speech relate to particular mental traits for fear that an oversimplified understanding will lead people to interpret their own or other's speech inaccurately.

But he gave an example from recent history, which also demonstrates the potential value of speech analysis for historians.

When John F. Kennedy was campaigning for president in 1960, his voice was filled with whistling "S" sounds, particularly when facing the emotional issue of his religion, Rousey said.

The theory behind speech analysis is that each person goes through various stages of psychological development as he is growing up, and in each stage certain speech sounds are mastered. If a person passes through a development stage without resolving the inner conflicts associated with it, his incorrect pronunciation of sounds learned during that period will betray the problem.

For example, Rousey said, during the stage when a child is learning assertive, masculine behavior, he should also be learning the "TH" sound. A child who has had problems relating to his father and learning about the father's masculine role will also have trouble pronouncing the "TH."

Quick Batter Bread Simple and Certain family

By HILDA BEASTALL

There must be hundreds of recipes published every year for making bread. Some are complicated and involve much time; some are for fancy breads, too sweet for enjoying with simple meals, but perfect for making into dessert by adding fresh fruits.

Quick Batter Bread is one recipe which bears repeating every six months to reach the new crop of homemakers interested in good food prepared at home. It is one I know to be useful for the busiest homemaker — man or woman, young or older than young. The three and a quarter cups of mixed flours are quickly and easily handled and there is only one rising period, which can be used in mixing up a batch of cookies to bake after the bread comes out.

Two hours is the time lapse from beginning to the taking out of the fragrant bread.

This recipe is simplified for beginners who have never tried breadmaking. In fact it isn't even necessary to make conventional bread loaves from this mixture.

Sometimes I make one small loaf, eight medium buns (in muffin pans) and 12 small buns (also in muffin pans).

Because this is a Batter Bread recipe, it makes a soft dough, not suited to kneading, rolling, and shaping into braids or for filled and rolled breads.

The batter can of course be spooned into one large mould pan, to give a fancy shape for a special occasion or for slicing with salads or soups. It takes no longer to prepare and you might as well do something different occasionally with an old recipe. Since the men are more imaginative cooks than women (we must admit all the renowned chefs are men) it is quite likely they will take this simple beginners recipe as a base for other creations. If they do, I would like to hear about them, if still concocted from basically simple ingredients and not with vast quantities of sugar and fat, both overused by average Canadians.

QUICK BATTER BREAD
1/4 cup warm water
1 tsp demerara sugar
1 tsp granular yeast OR 1 pkt.
2 tsp soft margarine
1 tsp demerara sugar OR 1 tsp dark molasses
1 tsp salt
1 (generous) cup hot water

One-third cup skim milk powder
1 egg
1 1/2 cup wholewheat flour
1/4 cup soya flour
1 1/2 cup unbleached flour
Measure warm water into large warm mixing bowl. Stir in teaspoon sugar and dissolve. Sprinkle yeast on surface and let stand 10 minutes until smooth.

Meanwhile in small bowl, measure margarine, sugar and salt. Add hot water and milk powder; stir until all dissolved and cooled to same temperature as yeast mixture.

Add the egg; beat with wooden spoon. Then add the egg-margarine mixture to the yeast mixture in large bowl, mixing well.

Measure the flours into another bowl, add half the flour mixture to the liquid, beating well with spoon as you add until smooth. Add remaining flour mixture, beating as well as possible. The dough will be a stiff batter, though quite moist.

Grease the pans very well. Spoon in the batter having the pans two-thirds filled to allow for rising.

Set to rise in a warm place out of draught, between 85 and 95 degs. F, for about one hour or until level with rims of pans.

Have oven preheated to a point just less than hot, about 375 degs. A small loaf may take 30 minutes; the buns in pans about 25 minutes. Crust should be an appetizing brown. Don't scorch.

Test for "doneness" by tapping the crust of bread or rolls with knuckles — a hollow sound indicates perfect cooking.

Remove from pans at once and cool on wire rack to allow steam to escape.

These breads and rolls are delicious when fresh and warm, certainly not hard to digest as we were led to believe. They may be kept for future use after thorough cooling, by wrapping in film or plastic bag to keep in refrigerator freezer for a few weeks.

But why not make a habit or baking a batch every week even though you have no expectation of making your entire bread requirements? This Quick Batter Bread is lovely at any meal with anything from soups to salads, to cheese and homemade jellies.

Chequeless Society Being Checked Out

By LEONARD SLOANE

NEW YORK (NYT) — the "chequeless society," long a computer man's dream, has been moving close to development in recent years with the introduction of new processes.

One of the newest of these processes is the Pay By Phone system instituted last fall by two U.S. savings banks. Customers who open special accounts can call in their payments to co-operating merchants, utilities and other organizations through these banks — without writing a cheque or a negotiated order of withdrawal.

Approval of state banking departments is necessary before such a system can be put into effect. Pay By Phone has been approved by the regulatory authorities in Minnesota and in Connecticut on a test basis.

The system is owned by Telephone Computer Services, a company owned principally by seven savings banks. Two of them are currently using it: the People's Savings Bank in Bridgeport, Conn. and the Farmers and Mechanics Savings Bank in Minneapolis.

The New York Bank for Savings in New York City, Buffalo Savings Bank, Syracuse Savings Bank, Community Savings Bank in Rochester, N.Y., and Washington Mutual Savings Bank in Seattle — have not instituted Pay By Phone yet. But their ownership obviously indicates a strong interest in this aspect of the electronic funds transfer operation planned for the not-too-distant future.

At People's, the system operates manually after a depositor opens a separate interest-bearing account and is given, in addition to an account number a code number. The depositor can then pay bills via the telephone to about 40 local and national companies that have agreed to participate.

Tunnel Collapses

CALCUTTA, India (CP) — At least 13 persons died when a tunnel under construction at Lok Tak hydroelectric project near here caved in Saturday.

Five victims were located Saturday and eight more bodies were unearthed from the debris Sunday as rescue operations continued. Agence France-Presse said.

Mobile Home Legislation Under Study

KELOWNA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Philip Young said Saturday a consumer services department task force is investigating the problems of mobile home buyers to prepare legislation.

She said current legislation protecting mobile home buyers is spread throughout six provincial departments and she hopes the new legislation will deal solely with mobile homes.

The minister said the attitudes in the industry are 35 years old and are no longer valid because one of every five homes bought in B.C. is a mobile home.

GRESHAM, Wis. (AP) — Seven Indians were taken into custody at gunpoint Sunday after scuffling with national guardsmen at a roadblock near an estate occupied by Indian militants.

The four men and three women will be charged with disorderly conduct, district attorney of Shawano County, Richard Stadelman said.

They had objected to having their car searched, and several knives and at least one handgun were confiscated, Stadelman said.

The incident occurred at one of the roadblocks maintained by the National Guard and the state highway patrol along a ceasefire perimeter around the 25-acre estate which the Menominee Warrior Society seized Jan. 1. A Roman Catholic order owns the estate but no longer uses it.

About 25 armed Indians still occupy the estate's 64-room mansion. They say they want the property turned over to the Menominee tribe as a first step in compensation for lands lost under 19th century treaties.

Rapport With Maestro Enhances Skilled Duet

By RICHARD OVENDEN

Masuko Ushoda lets her violin dangle limply at her side like a trinket on a charm bracelet as she waits to play. Cellist Lawrence Lesser is already immersed in the Allegro.

A short bridge by the orchestra and the violin is introduced—the diminutive Ushoda manipulating the instrument as if it were a priceless toy.

After the lively first theme of Brahms' Double Concerto for Violin and Cello in A Minor, the husband and wife team performs a contrasting piquantly contrasting, yet sensitive duet. They shared an obvious rapport with Maestro Laszlo Gati and were unhindered by the occasional rhythmic insecurity from the orchestra—the attention wandered a bit and there was the odd rocky passage, but everyone was working hard so that nothing got out of hand.

Ushoda and Lesser have played both together and individually with the Victoria Symphony orchestra over the past two years. Despite each having sharp skills they complement each other well without any effect of overwhelming.

Preceding the guest artists was Brahms' tragic Overture, handled by the orchestra with brisk elegance in its many melodic moments. The new sound barriers installed this season seem to have been perfected to the point of putting the brass section in better perspective where it seemed a bit lost at times before.

Surprise of the Sunday afternoon concert—to be repeated tonight at 8:30—was the success of the orchestra with Bartok's five-movement Concerto for Orchestra.

In many ways the Bartok piece is the most difficult piece the orchestra has ever done—and it shows that it is a much improved body in every section over the past four or five years.

The main challenge is that there are virtuoso performances for every instrument. The second trumpet has solos, second bassoon starts the fugue in the last movement—there are so many fugues every wind player gets a chance to solo.

While the Bartok program was an ambitious one overall, it was done well and there was a good feeling throughout with delightful explorations of orchestral colors and opportunity to single out the various instruments. The improved quality of the base section came through consistently and there was also evidence of increasing strength in the violas.

Kickback Laid On Ont. Tories

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Progressive Conservative Party was offered $30,000 if the government would buy almost 100 acres of land in Oakville, according to the Globe and Mail.

In a copyright story, the newspaper says the offer came in a letter dated Nov. 23, 1971, to William Kelly, chief fund-raiser for the party, from Ross A. Shouldice, a former Sudbury real estate agent and a party fund-raiser in Sudbury at the time.

The government closed the deal for the land 15 months later in March, 1973, apparently for $1,498,076, for a highway right-of-way, which the newspaper says may not be needed.

However, Kelly denied receiving the $30,000 and denied any involvement with the Oakville land purchase.

In another copyright story, the newspaper quotes Premier William Davis as saying Shouldice was removed from his position as fund-raiser because "I didn't like the way he was suggesting the party does business."

In an interview with the newspaper, Davis said Sunday he had no recollection of the Oakville land deal and that he was certain that it would not have involved a donation to the party.

"We just don't do business that way," the premier is quoted as saying.

In a third copyright story, The Globe and Mail says that despite government assurances that Shouldice is too ill to return to Canada, he continues to lead a busy life in Florida.

Last November, John Clement, then consumer and commercial relations minister and now attorney-general, told the legislature that Shouldice, wanted by a ministerial tribunal dealing with complaints involving a real estate transaction, was too ill to travel.

The ministry said it had letters from two doctors declaring that the man has "severe coronary artery disease."

However, The Globe and Mail quotes Shouldice's wife as saying that she acts as her husband's secretary and screens all calls and visitors "because he is such a busy man, he doesn't have time to talk to you without knowing first what it's about."

Shouldice currently is on a two-week business trip in Canada, she added.

The newspaper says the land was acquired for a link road between the Queen Elizabeth Way and the proposed Highway 403, but that the latest alignment for the main connecting highway places the actual interchange several hundred feet west of the land in question.

A search Friday of the titles of adjacent land to the 100-acre parcel failed to turn up any other properties that had been sold to the government, it adds.

Alan Feldman, president of Fantum Holdings Ltd., which owned the land, told the newspaper he does not believe Shouldice helped the sale and denied he had paid the offered commission to Shouldice.

In a letter to Shouldice dated Nov. 11, 1971, the newspaper says Feldman set out his company's financial situation with regard to the Oakville land in which he added: "Under the circumstances, we must find a way to bring the department of transportation and communications to a decision. If not, you can see the financial strain that will be levied against this company and its principals."

Bangladesh Top Aide Appointed

DACCA (AP) — Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, newly installed as Bangladesh's all-powerful president, selected a trusted follower Sunday as his top aide.

Named prime minister was Mohammed Mansoor Ali, home minister in the parliamentary government that Mujib jettisoned Saturday for a presidential system concentrating all authority in his own hands.

In a constitutional amendment approved by parliament without a dissenting vote, the 54-year-old shiek also was given power to form a one-party state by outlawing all opposition groups except his ruling Awami League.

The moves met a measure of approval among many Bengalis, but there also were unconfirmed reports of dissent among a few Awami League leaders who apparently feared that the shiek was slipping toward the kind of absolutism he fought during the pre-1971 days when Bangladesh was East Pakistan.

Sheik Mujib, on taking over as president, said his battle to give the people what they need motivated his changeover from parliamentary democracy.

"How long will friends continue to give food and other assistance?" he asked. "We must have population control. This free style cannot continue. We must discipline ourselves. I do not want to reduce my people to a nation of beggars."

Wilson To Meet Ford

LONDON (WP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson, hoping to strengthen East-West détente, visits Washington this week for his first meeting with President Ford.

Wilson is due in Moscow the following week and sees himself serving as a useful messenger between the two capitals. In view of Britain's troubled economy and reduced military outlays, however, the government here has no illusions about its influence on the two superpowers.

The Washington talks are expected to centre on an examination of whether Moscow is turning from the policy of improved relations with the West. Despite the Soviet Union's rejection of the trade pact with the U.S., Wilson is known to believe that no change of direction has been signalled.

Instead, the government here thinks that this episode is only "the backfire of a motor" that is running fairly well, as one key official put it. Russian diplomats are known to have suggested that Wilson and Ford issue a joint statement proclaiming that détente is alive and flourishing. The prime minister is expected to seek something like this in Washington.

The Soviet Union is also understood to have encouraged Wilson to urge Washington to reconvene the Geneva conference on the Middle East. The Russians have been saying that no peace is possible without their involvement and the present piecemeal approach conducted by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger excludes them from the negotiations.

The prime minister holds a middle view. He believes that the Kissinger technique has a good chance of soon achieving another agreement.

$1.5M to Buy Freedom

VANCOUVER — Gary Thornton, 19, intends to use a $1.5 million damages award to establish himself as an independent, self-sufficient person. Thornton was paralysed after he broke his neck attempting a difficult somersault during a physical education class in 1971 at a Prince George secondary school.

He will use the money to buy a house and a van with hand controls, but added his lawyer advised him not to expect any money for three years, pending appeals.

MONTREAL — Lawyer Frank Shoofey said during the weekend he had expected to receive a letter from Richard Blass denying involvement in the deaths of 13 persons at the Club Gargantua night-spot last week. An intermediary told him last week that Blass would be sending the letter, the lawyer said. Blass, one of Canada's most wanted criminals, was killed by police during a pre-dawn raid Friday on a chalet in Val David, 50 miles northwest of Montreal.

VANCOUVER — A summons has been issued for a woman charged with "fraudulently pretending to use a kind of witchcraft, sorcery, enchantry or conjuration." Mary Lane also is charged with defrauding Jennifer Lillian Rock of Vancouver of $50 by pretending to use witchcraft.

VANCOUVER — A 21-year-old New Westminster woman has been named Miss Black British Columbia for 1975. Sherry Watkins was crowned at the B.C. Association for the Advancement of Colored People's second annual beauty pageant in Vancouver. Miss Watkins, one of eight Lower Mainland competitors, is a graduate of North Delta secondary school.

LANSING, Mich. — Roman Oleznick was content in prison so he stayed 38 years longer than he probably had to. Now, at the age of 75, Oleznick wants to go home. He was imprisoned in 1921 after being convicted in a bank robbery that left two persons dead. For decades, Oleznick asked the parole board to leave him in prison but next week he is to be paroled to live with a sister in Bay City.

NEW YORK — Andrew Levitt and his six-year-old son spent their last few moments together Sunday night in a private airline lounge. Then Danny — under a court order — was flown to Israel to the custody of his mother. "I like it here and I love my daddy," a tearful Danny told newsmen before he left. "I want to stay here." Levitt said he planned to visit his son and hire an Israeli lawyer to continue his fight in the courts there.

Wife Locked Up

NAPLES, Italy (UPI) — Police arrested Luigi Albano, 40, today on a charge of keeping his wife locked in their house for 45 days.

Police said Albano also kept his 14-year-old son Marcello captive in the house to keep watch on Albano's 42-year-old wife, Carmela.

Following an anonymous telephone call, police went to the house and found Albano leaving after locking the door with a large padlock. They ordered him to open the door and accompanied him inside.

They said they found Carmela Albano and Marcello in the dark. All windows and shutters had been sealed.

FOREIGN JOURNALISTS NAME TOP MOVIES

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Actor Jack Nicholson received a golden globe award for best actor and the motion picture he starred in, Chinatown, was named best picture of 1974 by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association this weekend.

Gena Rowlands was honored as best actress for her performance as the distraught housewife in A Woman Under the Influence.

Ingmar Bergman's scenes from a marriage, starring Liv Ullman was named as the best foreign picture of 1974.

In the comedy motion picture category, Art Carney won as best performer for Harry and Tonto, and Raquel Welch for Three Musketeers.

Chinatown also earned awards for best direction for Roman Polanski and screen-writing for Robert Towne. The Longest Yard was picked as best comedy movie of the year.

In the television category, the British import, Upstairs, Downstairs was the favorite, and best actress and actor awards for comedy series were presented to Valerie Harper for Rhoda and Alan Alda for M-A-S-H.

A Tortured Hero Will Fight Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Partially paralyzed and almost unable to speak, Spyridon Moustaklis is going home, a Greek war hero returning to a country where one government decorated him for bravery and another tortured him.

Moustaklis, 48, has completed several weeks of treatment at Walter Reed (U.S.) Army Medical Centre for the effects of torture he suffered under the recently-deposed military regime in Greece.

"We must go home and continue working," said Christina Moustaklis, his wife. They arrive in Athens on Tuesday.

Asked how he was tortured, Moustaklis pulled back his shirt to show scars on his neck and shoulders, reminders of the time he was burned with electric cattle prods. Asked if he would like to see his torturer punished, Moustaklis made a motion with his hand. His wife said that meant, "Yes, machine-gunned to death."

The career military officer was left paralyzed on his right side and unable to speak when struck in the neck while in jail. He was arrested by the Greek military police in May, 1973, following a naval mutiny that was to have been a protest against the military regime. He said he had not participated in the protest.

The United States government aided that military regime, and signs were that both governments did not want Moustaklis to come to the U.S. for medical help.

Mrs. Moustaklis said that the day before they were to leave for Washington, they received telephone calls from the U.S. Embassy in Athens and George Levidis, consul-general of Greece in Washington. Both callers suggested they not make the trip, Mrs. Moustaklis said. A spokesman at the Greek Embassy said Levidis is in Greece and unavailable for comment.

Moustaklis was admitted to the hospital after a campaign by Greek exile leaders in the U.S. and several members of Congress.

It Was a Very Good Year for the Moviegoer

By VINCENT CANBY
New York Times

NEW YORK — It needn't always be The Ten Best Films of the Year. Some years there may only be three, other years seven, or, as I choose to think in 1974, 11. It wasn't one of those years that will go down in history as exceptional but it was, in retrospect, a very good year, especially for American films.

The truly remarkable films of the year were all European (six of my list of 11 are foreign), yet one of these was made in 1965 and another in 1969, meaning that at 1974's American films were competing with the best European films representing virtually a decade of work.

My choices of the 11 best films of 1974, winnowed from a list of 20 and listed in alphabetical order, are as follows:

"Amarcord," directed by Federico Fellini; screenplay (Italian with English subtitles) and story by Fellini and Tonino Guerra; produced by Franco Cristaldi; distributed by Roger Corman — New World Films. Fellini's beautiful, moving reminiscence of his youth in a small town in Fascist Italy is one of this director's most loving, most imaginative movies.

"Badlands," directed, written and produced by Terrence Malick; a Pressman-Williams production distributed by Warner Brothers. This first film to be directed by Terrence Malick is the toughest, most original American film of the year. It's a ferocious and scary film, beautifully acted by Martin Sheen, Sissy Spacek and Warren Oates.

"California Split," directed by Robert Altman; screenplay by Joseph Walsh; produced by Altman and Walsh; distributed by Columbia Pictures. Robert Altman's best film of the year (his other film, "Thieves Like Us," is almost as good) is supposed to be about gambling. But because Altman can't make a simple movie, "California Split" also manages to suggest a lot of things about ambition, friendship, the quality of American middle-class life and what might happen should we attain our paltry goals, if only by chance.

"Claudine," directed by John Berry; screenplay by Lester and Tina Pine; produced by Hannah Weinstein; a Third World Cinema production distributed by 20th Century-Fox. The best American comedy of the year — also the best black film — is anything but a black comedy. "Claudine" is an ordinary film of the year (his other transformed into meaningful social comedy).

"Daisy Miller," directed and produced by Peter Bogdanovich; screenplay by Frederic Raphael, based on the Henry James story; distributed by Paramount. The total effect of this film is that of an illustrated introduction to a literary classic, but it's been done so beautifully that one responds to it with easy warmth. Cyril Shepherd seems absolutely right as the beautiful Daisy and receives support from Barry Brown, Cloris Leachman and Mildred Natwick.

"Harry & Tonto," directed and produced by Paul Mazursky; screenplay by Mazursky and Josh Greenfield; distributed by 20th Century-Fox. Paul Mazursky, director and co-author of "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice" and author-director of "Blume in Love," is getting better and better and "Harry & Tonto" is his best. It's the picturesque tale of a 72-year-old New Yorker traveling across America with his large, ailing orange cat. Brilliantly acted by Art Carney, the film is equally unafraid of real sentiment and the seamier prospects for a society whose younger generation is at such loose ends.

"Lacombe Lucien," directed and produced by Louis Malle; screenplay (French with English subtitles) by Malle and Patrick Modiano; distributed by 20th Century-Fox. A precise, rueful film about a young French farm boy who, seemingly by chance, joins the German police during the last months of the Nazi occupation of France.

"Man Is Not a Bird," directed by Dusan Makavejev; screenplay (Serbo-Croatian with English subtitles) by Makavejev; produced by Avala Film; distributed by Grove Press. The first film (made in 1966) by the Yugoslav director, "Man Is Not a Bird" is one of the two most original, sophisticated and complex films to come out of a Communist society (the other is the Cuban "Memories of Underdevelopment").

"Le Petit Theatre de Jean Renoir," directed, produced and narrated by Jean Renoir; screenplay (French with English subtitles) by Renoir; distributed by Phoenix Films. Three short films, plus a between-the-acts song by Jeanne Moreau, become a kind of graceful farewell performance by this greatest of French directors.

"The Phantom of Liberty," directed by Luis Bunuel; screenplay (French with English subtitles) by Bunuel and Jean-Claude Carriere; produced by Serge Silberman; distributed by 20th Century-Fox. The Golden Age of Bunuel continues into his eighth decade as the 74-year-old director returns to the surreal form of his "L'Age D'Or," made in 1930. A dazzling collection of loosely related tales.

"Scenes From a Marriage," directed and written (in Swedish with English subtitles) by Ingmar Bergman; a Cinematograph AB production distributed by Cinema V. Bergman's five-hour TV drama edited into a 168-minute theatrical epic about the losses and achievements in a 20-year love affair. Liv Ullmann's performance is one of the best of this or any other year.

For the record, the runners-up, in no special order of preference, were:

Rainer Werner Fassbinder's "Ali," Hal Ashby's "The Last Detail," Robert Altman's "Thieves Like Us," Francis Ford Coppola's "The Conversation," Cinda Firestone's "Attica," Ted Kotcheff's "The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz," Roman Polanski's "Chinatown," Bill Wilder's "The Front Page" and Sidney Lumet's "Murder on the Orient Express."

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Friday's answer: 313 blades at $3.13.

"Okay, Mike," said Harry. "Call me next week."
His friend smiled. "I'll do that, but what's your new number? I know the exchange, of course."
"Easy to remember," replied Harry. "The first half of each is the second half of the other, and you know my old number. Also the new number is one less than twice the old number."
What was the new number?

Cub Vet Signs

CHICAGO (AP) — Shortstop Don Kessinger, a 10-year veteran, has signed a 1975 baseball contract with Chicago Cubs. Kessinger, 32, who batted .259 last season, is the last holdover regular from the 1969 Cub team which did a September swoon to blow the National League East Division pennant.

Neither side vulnerable, West deals.

If the reader will look at the four hands in the diagram, he will perceive that there is no way of beating South's six-spade contract. Nevertheless, by virtue of a brilliant defensive falsecard, the East defender succeeded in creating a trend of thought in declarer's mind which led to his defeat.

On West's opening lead of the ace of hearts, Ehrenbach, East, dropped the king! West, of course, continued with an-

LITTLE PEOPLE'S PUZZLE

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In real life, deception is not considered to be a social virtue, for obvious reasons. But at the bridge table, if one is to obtain maximum efficiency, the application of deceptive tactics becomes a social necessity, and meets with the approval of our bridge-playing society.

Generally speaking, more often than not the practice of deceptive tactics brings better results when declarer applies it, since a defender, by a defensive play, may easily mislead partner as to the true state of affairs. And, of course, to deceive partner is not deception — it is sabotage.

Yet, situations arise where a defender deliberately (and properly) misleads partner to gain a desired result. In today's deal, we have such a case. The hand is one of the finest examples I have ever seen of defensive deception. It arose in the Masters Pairs Championship of 1955. Sitting East was Jack Ehrenbach, of Los Angeles.

Neither side vulnerable, West deals.

If the reader will look at the four hands in the diagram, he will perceive that there is no way of beating South's six-spade contract. Nevertheless, by virtue of a brilliant defensive falsecard, the East defender succeeded in creating a trend of thought in declarer's mind which led to his defeat.

On West's opening lead of the ace of hearts, Ehrenbach, East, dropped the king! West, of course, continued with another heart, which was ruffed by dummy's queen (to prevent the "obvious" overruff if dummy ruffed low).

When East followed to the second round of hearts, declarer was certain that the only plausible excuse for East's falsecard was that East possessed the J-10-6 of spades. So the seven of spades was led from dummy at trick three, and the finesse was taken when East followed with the six. West's jack captured the setting trick.

Before you criticize declarer, remember one thing: East would also have made the falsecard if he had held the J-10-6 of trumps and declarer would then have become a temporary genius instead of a gullible victim.

After Pact: Vietnam Bitter Issue

By PHILIP McCOMBS
Washington Post

SAIGON — What is the U.S. interest in South Vietnam in 1975, nearly two years after the signing of the Paris cease-fire agreement?

What is Washington's policy here, and what should it be? While the debate on these questions no longer dominates U.S. political life, it remains, here at least, as bitter and sometimes as hysterical as ever.

One senior U.S. diplomat at a recent dinner described a reporter for a major U.S. newspaper here as a "traitor."

A liberal Democratic Congressman, visiting Saigon recently, gazed glumly from a coffee shop at the heavy downtown traffic and said: "Yeah, I listened to all U.S. Ambassador Graham Martin's arguments. What a bunch of crap."

All sides seem convinced that the way this drama finally plays itself out will deeply affect our self-image as well as the world's view of us as a people and a nation.

Our policy on how to close the drama here appears to be: Get out of Vietnam by ending massive military and economic aid as quickly as possible without letting the Communists take over; or, if they do eventually take over, without letting it appear that this was due to a lack of U.S. will.

As part of this goal, the State Department, through the U.S. embassy here, appears during the last year to have been waging two fights, one a propaganda battle against Congress and the other a secret struggle to keep President Thieu in line with U.S. objectives.

Both battles are going on essentially out of view, although the first has surfaced frequently in the form of the American embassy's strained relations with the press.

Martin exploded publicly a year ago over a lengthy news article documenting the hypothesis that massive U.S. assistance to Saigon set the pace of the war.

Now that U.S. military aid has been halved to $700 million and the pace of the war has dramatically shifted, with Saigon on the defensive inside the South, it seems possible that Martin's anger was stimulated more by the article's impact on Congress than by any errors it might have contained.

This conclusion seems all the more likely given the bitter mood of many U.S. diplomats here. One quickly learns that not only journalists but a surprisingly large number of Congressmen seem to be on the "traitor" list.

During the past month of spectacular Communist battlefield successes, this bitterness has been accompanied by fear.

"Jesus, this is the worst it's ever been," said one diplomat recently.

"We may not even be able to get out of here," Martin is an experienced, resourceful and tough diplomat who has formed a clear idea of what he hopes to accomplish here and who believes that, regardless of the atmosphere on Capitol Hill today, most Americans and members of Congress ultimately will share his point of view.

With adequate U.S. economic aid, Martin told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in testimony last July, "we can confidently anticipate that in a very few years we will be able to regard our

Nanaimo Schools Reopen

NANAIMO—All 43 schools in the Nanaimo School District on Vancouver Island were back to normal today following the ratification Saturday of a new collective agreement between the district and 175 non-teaching employees.

The employees, represented by local 606 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, voted 84.6 per cent in favor of the agreement Saturday.

The school board had earlier given unanimous approval to the agreement.

No details of the new agreement were released.

WOMAN HURT IN CRASH

An 18-year-old Colwood woman is reported in good condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital today with fractures following a two-car collision on the Trans-Canada Highway Saturday.

Police report Marla McHale, 2545 Peatl, collided with the rear of a vehicle driven by Kathleen Stanforth, 2895 Rainville, near Selwyn about 3:30 p.m.

Tank-led convoys still rumble despite two years of peace

Vietnam involvement as closed. If the secretary's (Kissinger's) recommendations are heeded, our involvement will be closed in the way that the great majority of Americans quite obviously want it closed—leaving the Republic of Vietnam economically viable, militarily capable of defending itself with its own manpower against both external aggression and externally supported internal subversion, and free to choose its own leaders and its own government as its citizens themselves may freely determine.

Kissinger, in a letter last June 1 to the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, wrote, "I have a very personal sense of obligation to do everything I can to make good on our moral commitment to assist (South Vietnam) in its survival as an independent state."

This survival, wrote the secretary, "is indispensable to the creation of an enduring structure of peace in Southeast Asia."

Kissinger also wrote—that this a year and a half after the cease-fire agreement—that America's long-range objective "is not just a reduction in the level of hostilities but more importantly the creation in Southeast Asia of an environment conducive to enduring peace and reconstruction."

These goals have tended to keep the United States in a position of stark confrontation with Hanoi two years after the cease-fire agreement.

In the U.S. embassy's view, Hanoi is principally to blame for this. According to intelligence reports, Hanoi has not given up its goal of a total victory in the South by political, military and economic means.

Its troops are now attacking widely in key areas of the country in what intelligence sources say might be termed a limited offensive.

Politically, the Communists, encouraged for a time by the rise of a vocal political opposition to Thieu in Saigon, have announced that they will no longer negotiate with Thieu but only with a more reasonable successor.

In its public statements, the U.S. embassy appears to be backing Thieu to the hilt.

Thus the embassy consistently has attacked the Communists with an intense rhetoric reminiscent of the height of U.S. involvement here.

From this over-all situation of confrontation and continuing war, one gets the sense that the cease-fire agreement has been forgotten and replaced by a win-lose situation, with no other possibility for resolving the conflict.

But U.S. diplomats here last year were indeed exploring other possibilities.

While the U.S. embassy was doing its best to support South Vietnam's fight against the Communists and was willing to talk publicly about this, it was not willing to talk about its secret battle to keep President Thieu in line with Washington's objectives.

In fact, Martin bridled frequently during the past year at any suggestion in the press of tensions between the embassy and the Saigon government.

But extensive interviews with Western diplomats and Vietnamese government officials here suggest that Thieu may be too intransigently anti-Communist to suit U.S. policymakers.

He has been pressuring Thieu for at least a year to be more flexible toward the Communists, sources say. What this "flexibility" is, exactly, is unclear, but observers have suggested that it might mean making some substantial concession that would get political talks going again in Paris under the terms of the cease-fire agreement.

"Flexibility" is something that may fit well under the rubric of détente with the major Communist powers that forms Kissinger's global policy.

But Thieu, according to reliable reports, would have nothing to do with it, despite explicit signals from Martin that détente might have some beneficial results for Thieu's government: Witness the decrease in the Soviet and Chinese supply of arms to Hanoi during the year.

Even arguments that such flexibility would improve Thieu's image on Capitol Hill and perhaps lead to bigger aid allotments for his government failed to convince Thieu.

In fact, despite Martin's reputation in Washington as an unabashed Thieu supporter, Thieu is said to regard the crusty diplomat as completely untrustworthy.

Whether or not this fear is warranted, Thieu has much to fear from Congress.

November's Democratic landslide had a tremendously disappointing impact on his government, coming as it did atop the last Congress' Democratic-supported slash in Saigon military aid and its rejection of any significant increase in economic aid.

Militarily, the cutbacks have not only placed the country in a completely defensive posture but have generated a psychology of desperation and retreat.

If this trend continues, it is not at all clear that it will lead to a balanced political settlement in the South.

For one thing, the Communists, sensing victory, may simply press on all the harder.

For another, Thieu himself is said by some who know and watch him carefully to be somewhat apocalyptic in his view of developments.

He is said to feel deeply and bitterly that his former American allies now are undercutting him.

In his speeches during the past year, Thieu has spoken passionately of fighting to the last drop of blood and the last bullet, and has proclaimed that there can be no coalition government with the Communists.

If the situation deteriorates too much, some observers think, Thieu may be inclined to simply pull out and let the house of cards fall.

Martin in the past year pressured Thieu, according to sources, to make a series of concessions to the political opposition—in short, to democratize, or at least to give the appearance of democratizing.

In some cases, Martin presented the names of persons he wanted Thieu to get rid of in face-to-face conversations with Thieu.

In other cases, the pressure was reportedly indirect.

Thieu went along with many of these suggestions, firing long-time aides and apparently divesting himself of some powers. The advantages seemed clearer than in the case of being flexible with the Communists: If Thieu comes to the presidential election next October as the only real candidate, the negative reaction in the U.S. Congress is likely to be drastic.

Last May he fired Nguyen Van Ngan, the palace strongman who had engineered Thieu's iron control over the legislature and gained passage of a constitutional amendment allowing Thieu to tion, reportedly convincing them that the United States might be about to topple him.

Opening these contacts, or re-opening them in many cases, in fact amounted to a major policy move because it appeared to open a new option of dropping Thieu in favor of one of his opponents.

The situation cooled, however, after the Embassy became convinced that the opposition could put forward no powerful leaders who could command a truly massive following among the people.

In addition to the pressures

Purse-Strings Strangle Stage

By DONALD McDONALD
Times London Bureau

LONDON — A wave of dependency is sweeping London's theatreland, the west end.

January and February have never been renowned for large audiences. But this year it is something more than inclement weather that is stalking live theatre.

Inflation has wrapped an icy hand around the throats of all but a few successful shows.

Three theatres have dusted off the "closed" signs in reaction to what impresario Sir Bernard Delfont calls "the worst post-Christmas slump for some years."

The saucy comedy "A Bit Between The Teeth," starring Brian Rix at The Cambridge, folded on Saturday night, Jan. 25.

So did another comedy called "Birds of Paradise" at The Garrick theatre.

The pantomime "Cinderella" starring former skin-and-bone model Twiggy will give its last performance at the Casino next Saturday night, Feb. 1.

All three shows had been doing very well until just after Christmas.

But with Britain's general economic downturn the middle class support that normally sustains winter theatreland has faded.

Sir Bernard thinks the closings have nothing to do with merit.

"Perhaps the west end is a bit pricey now," he added, "especially with money so short."

Brian Rix, who called the situation "like a cold wind from Siberia," is taking his show on a tour of Britain and slashed seat prices drastically in the last few days.

"Worst hit are comedies," he said. "I expect four more shows to come off within six weeks. Most are just being kept on in hope."

Ironically, Britain is having one of its mildest winters in living memory, which should mean good audiences.

"It would be a mistake to whip shows off just now," says impresario Ray Cooney.

"Better to lost money for eight weeks, weather the storm and wait for the good times once again."

Nothing gives any real hope of improvement, however, until Canadians, Americans and others start arriving again for the summer tourist season.

Dark Predictions on Light: Ugly, Harmful, Bad for Sex

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Ralf Kelman is light-headed.

As a light-environmentalist he makes light waves in a society he claims is obsessed with light — too much and the wrong kind — to the extent that it is ugly, wasteful, psychologically and biologically harmful.

Bad light even affects the sex drive, he suggests darkly.

Over the last three years Kelman has managed to grab a lot of headlines waging his campaign against light pollution — the front page of the Tribune in Chicago, picked up by the Christian Science Monitor and Associated Press, prominence in Milwaukee and Toronto papers, a magazine piece in Maclean's, generous feature and column treatment in hometown Vancouver, CBC, BBC and CBS radio and network TV exposure, lots of talk radio time.

He has taught in schools and lectured at University of Waterloo.

Delighted by City

The one-man light brigade landed here in what Kelman calls Life Probe — Victoria. Right off, he was delighted by our lighting heritage, the decorative multi-globe, low-intensity streets lights of Victoria and Oak Bay. But he deplors the trend to orange-glowing sodium vapor and ghastly blue mercury vapor lamps on streets, highways and shopping centres.

In three weeks' visit funded by Vancouver Art Gallery resident artist program, 27-year-old Kelman wants to make a lot more people see the light, focusing first on some cabinet ministers.

He had hoped to make the education department a major objective, but feels the minister may be distracted with internal troubles besetting her administration. Schools are a prime offender in Kelman's eyes.

Some classrooms have no windows and are totally dependent on artificial light the year-round. That is wrong enough. But school builders make it worse by over-installing fluorescent lighting, the most glaring example of poor lighting the world has known, according to Kelman. (He'll soon be writing a book on fluorescent proliferation.)

Fluorescent Plague

"I'm trying to alert citizens to what I call the Fluorescent Plague," Kelman said.

Architects and lighting consultants are gradually coming around to question lighting standards that have escalated steadily in the last 30 years, he claims.

Schools, he notes, are generally required to have 70-foot-candles of light intensity at desk level. Very often, cool, white fluorescent is specified.

"Maybe we don't need more than 50 foot-candles — above that we may only get glare," Kelman said the American Institute of Architects thinks as little as three to 10 foot-candles of light is adequate for efficient reading, making schools look guilty of illumination overkill.

Office buildings and industry are in the same category throughout most of North America, Kelman declares: the fluorescent tube as an instrument of destruction.

Guided by the U.S.-based non-professional Illumination Engineering Society, architects and designers of institutional lighting have set lighting standards beyond what is desirable or economic, the light critic said.

Sales Pressure

He did not say the powerful manufacturers such as GE and Westinghouse, or the vendors of electricity are to blame, but he did say the IES is a sales organization bending to "strong pressure from certain multi-national lighting centres."

"The world is sitting under fluorescent. A few people in the professions are aware of the scary situation, but they are not speaking out fast enough," Kelman lamented.

While the optical supply industry is booming, optometrists tell him they see people every day suffering from fluorescent light. The people who conceived it — cool, white fluorescent particularly — thought it was just an aid to vision.

They may have been unaware of the implications, but it is now known light is important to glandular and metabolic functions; for example, hens exposed to extra light lay more eggs. Light depresses sexual functions and research has shown sex organs shrink during periods of long exposure to light.

People who work all day under blazing fluorescent lights feel washed out by evening, and some may gradually feel dehumanized if there are no windows to admit daylight, Kelman believes.

Brain Affected

Medical research finds light reduces the calcium-absorbing capacity of the body, secretions and hormonal responses of the thyroid, pituitary, hypothalamus and other regions of the brain.

Zoo animals exposed to nothing but cool, white fluorescent try to hide, stop eating and will die if a full spectrum of light is not restored.

Hyperactivity in children may be stimulated by certain fluorescent lighting in schools, other research shows.

Kelman has nothing if not reliable authorities. The way he interprets it all makes sense, and he agrees concern and studies about light pollution are growing, but he still feels like a pioneer.

Kelman has a background in art, has done light sculpture and apart from fees for his numerous appearances has existed on grants — two from Canada Council and one L.P.P.

His first successes were outdoors — persuading Chicago to think twice about installing brighter street lights, halting a Toronto plan to spend more on street lights, and encouraging Vancouver to study its lighting needs — and may be hard to match indoors.

Quoting Fabor Biren, one of the thinkers on the subject, Kelman offers: "light and color (must be) for the body, the eye, the mind and the soul."

Thieves Hit Colwood Club

Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club, 629 Goldstream, was robbed of approximately $195, several cigars and an undetermined amount of liquor, Colwood RCMP said today.

The incident is believed to have occurred late Saturday or early Sunday morning. It was reported to the police by a night watchman who found a side-door of the club unlocked Sunday morning.

HOT TIME ON MANOEUVRES

The Victoria-based 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry arrived back in Victoria today after two weeks of "warm" winter warfare training at Camp Wainwright, Alberta.

Some 450 men of the battalion flew out of Victoria, January 15-16, in Canadian Forces Hercules aircraft.

After landing at Wainwright, the troops deployed to the training area, setting up their Arctic tents on the snowy, wind-swept prairies in temperatures hovering around the zero mark.

For the first three days the men were involved in company training, where soldiers new to the battalion were initiated into tent living in a snow-covered world.

Thereafter, training progressed to small unit tactics, helicopter loading procedures, and live-firing exercises by day and by night. The manoeuvres culminated in a three-day battalion exercise.

The biggest problem the Patricia's faced was unseasonably warm weather.

Wainwright has not been living up to its reputation as an "ice-box" in January, as a mild spell hit shortly after the battalion's arrival. Temperatures were often in the mid-twenties during the day — much too warm for men dressed in Arctic clothing.

One of the basic principles of winter operations is that a man must never be separated from his survival equipment.

Therefore, as the troops moved on snowshoes and skis during their 72-hour exercise, each 10-man group towed a 200-pound toboggan containing tent and rations. The warm weather made this a difficult task.

Corporal Frank McEvoy, an air element policeman now serving with the unit's military police detachment summed up the situation: "This was my first winter exercise, and I really enjoyed it. But it was a lot milder than we expected."

The weather will certainly get colder for the 100 men of "B" Company. Under the command of Major J. S. (Jim) Kempling, they flew north to Alaska on Saturday to join a U.S. battalion at Camp Greely for two weeks of combined winter training.

Soviets Top Arms Spending

WASHINGTON (WP) — The nations of the world spent nearly a quarter of a trillion dollars on defence in 1973, with the Soviet Union leading the list and spending an estimated 10 per cent more on armaments than the United States.

The statistics — covering 136 countries — were published in the seventh annual report of the State Department's Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. The agency issues the reports to help "in focusing attention on the problems and possibilities of reducing global military expenditures and limiting world-wide arms transfers," according to ACDA director Fred Ikle.

Though the statistics are always about a year old, the agency's survey of 1973 spending calls attention to three important trends which clearly were accelerated in 1974.

The study notes that the international arms trade doubled in 1973 to $8.7 billion annually.

It was roughly $4.4 billion 10 years ago.

That trend increased in 1974 as U.S., French, British and Soviet arms continue to pour into the Middle East and Persian Gulf regions in unprecedented quantities.

The survey also notes that the appetite for weapons in the so-called developing countries is steadily growing.

The report indicates that the growth rate of both military expenditures and armed forces in these countries is now higher than the rate in developed nations.

Similarly, the share of gross national product in these developing nations is beginning to approach that of the developed countries, according to the State Department assessment.

If there is any hint of optimism about the statistics in the report, it is in the assessment that the overall growth rate of real world military expenditures "has apparently decelerated" somewhat.

CUPE Strike Slows City Down

Services normally provided to Victoria taxpayers were either eliminated or drastically cut back to a skeletal level today as a strike by the city's 280 outside employees — members of Local 50 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees — began at 7 a.m.

Picket lines outside City Hall were honored by members of CUPE Local 388, representing about 200 clerical, technical, engineering and inspection staff. That left only 35 non-union staff, including department heads and their assistants, to try to carry on the job of running the city's operations.

Immediate impact of the walk-out was felt by hundreds of commuting motorists, caught in a traffic snarl as they found their route barred by the Johnson Street Bridge left in the "up" position.

But probably the most widespread effect of the shutdown of many services will be the absence of garbage collection. There will be no pick-up service for households, and the city's contingency plans call on residents to do the job themselves by taking their garbage to a temporary depot at the heliport located off Esquimalt Road, overlooking the Inner Harbor.

The city has stockpiled 75,000 plastic garbage bags and these will be available free of charge at City Hall.

A major source of worry to the city administration is the possibility that fuel supplies may be cut off to the heating plant in City Hall, which also serves the McPherson Playhouse, the senior citizens' activity centre, the provincial courts — police station complex (including jail cells) and the stores on the opposite side of Centennial Square.

Only one filling outlet on Pandora serves the system, and CUPE spokesman Jim Walker indicated today that the installation will be picketed and he expects the suppliers, Chevron, to honor the pickets. Otherwise the company itself would be picketed, he added.

Usually there are two oil deliveries a week. An official said there is normally only enough fuel for about three days' use, but that could be stretched to a week if thermostats are turned down.

Walker said there was another fuel implication which could affect users of domestic gas. If a train hauling propane tanks to the Hydro gas works crosses Johnson Street bridge, it will be declared hot, he said.

To help conserve supplies, a Silver Threads spokesman said the centre will close its afternoon sessions one hour earlier — at 3:30 p.m. instead of 4:30 — and cancel all its evening programs until further notice.

A picket line went up on the Douglas Street and city hall, and Pandora between Douglas and Government, and from Douglas to the west boundary of the police station along Fisgard.

The line extended across the front entrances of the police station and adjoining Provincial Court and was respected by inside staff workers. Police were given passes to go through the line.

Provincial court was adjourned from regular starting time at 10 a.m. to 11 while arrangements were made to have clerical work done outside the premises.

Parking commission staff respected the picket line on Fisgard, and according to a sign inside the entry to the parking building, motorists were to use a coin-operated meter.

City administrative staff had prepared a "notice to citizens of the city of Victoria," outlining the effects of the strike and measures to keep essential services going. It was hoped to give this notice immediate publicity by inserting it as a display advertisement in Victoria's two daily newspapers, but the city was told

Remember Showdown in the NHL, that between-periods promotion during last season's televised hockey games in which top scorers tried to beat the best goal-tenders? Well, it isn't dead after all.

Victoria Cougar owner-coach Pat Ginnell and Western Canada Hockey League president Ed Chynoweth have revived it and the deadline is 5 p.m. Tuesday. Ginnell has until then to pay a $1,000 fine for failing to control his team in games last week in Winnipeg and Brandon. Ginnell says he won't pay and Chynoweth says if he doesn't, he'll cancel Cougars' home game Tuesday night against Kamloops Chiefs. Page 10.

★ Lockout Notice

Lockout notice was served by five municipalities, the Capital Regional District and School District 61 today and was branded an "irresponsible position" by the president of civic outside workers who led his 280-member local on strike at 8 a.m.

Jim Walker, of Local 50 Canadian Union of Public Employees (outside staff) reiterated the union's willingness to resume contract talks with the city at any time.

Municipal negotiators last week promised lockout action on a united front if outside workers went on strike.

It was "an irresponsible position for the municipalities to be taking," Walker said. He had tried earlier to get Mayor Peter Pollen to take a personal role in negotiations because it was "in the public interest to avert a strike."

In the first civic strike here since June 1954, virtually all municipal services in the city were halted or slowed down, partially maintained by about 30 supervisory staff.

School maintenance staff will be among those locked out, but Greater Victoria Teachers' Association president Mavis De Girolamo said teachers had decided to cross picket lines and keep the classrooms open.

Lockout notice was served by Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt, the regional district, Sidney and Greater Victoria School District. It cannot take effect, however, until 72 hours after the report of mediator Clark Gilmour has been filed with Labor Minister Bill King.

Teachers will not undertake any duties they do not normally perform, De Girolamo said. Refusing to cross picket lines, she said, would be a violation of teachers' contract with the school board and leave them open to reprisals.

NEWS BRIEFS

DOG PACK MAULTS GIRL

MISSION (CP) — A three-year-old girl is in satisfactory condition in hospital today after she was mauled by a pack of dogs near her home in this Fraser Valley community about 40 miles east of Vancouver.

Christal Roule was found in a neighbor's yard by a passing motorist. Her clothes had been torn off and she suffered injuries to her head, legs and right arm.

Rail Strike Grows

ASSOCIATED PRESS — A wildcat strike against the Burlington Northern Railroad spread to other lines throughout midwestern U.S. today despite a court order calling for an end to the walkout.

The railway also operates in B.C. and Winnipeg but there no pickets at Burlington's B.C. facilities at midnight and a Vancouver source said train movements were expected to be normal.

4 Held in Fire

MONTREAL (CP) — Four persons are being detained on a coroner's warrant for questioning in the deaths of 13 people at the Gargantua nightclub last week. Three of those detained, a man and two women, were arrested when police raided Richard Blass's hideout in Val David, 60 miles north of Montreal, killing Blass.

Civil War Feared

LISBON (UPI) — Foreign Minister Mario Soares said today provocative moves by the Communist party have opened the possibility of a civil war and foreign intervention in Portugal. Soares spoke after Communist mobs broke up a convention by the Social Democratic Centre party over the weekend and brought expressions of fear from socialists of the growing power of Portugal's far left Communist party.

Stock Markets Jumping Despite Gloomy News

Times News Services

Stock market prices in London and New York surged ahead today despite the release of two reports in Washington that showed the U.S. had accumulated its largest trade deficit of this century and that productivity had dropped for the first time in the nation's history.

In London, the stock market boom which began last week turned into a wild buying spree today, with the Financial Times index putting on 22.1 points in the first hour of trading.

The rise to 239.1 was the biggest ever recorded in such a short time.

By noon, the index had slipped to 229.8.

On Friday, a record 10 per cent was added to the share index which put on 19.9 points in the day.

Today's increases added about $5.1 billion to total share values, on top of about $4.6 billion Friday.

"It's a wild scramble again," said one broker. "Friday was quiet compared to this."

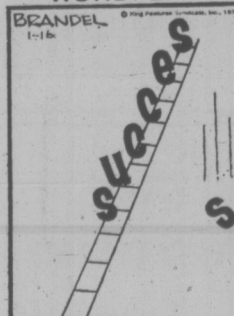

In early trading on the New York Stock exchange, prices

Second Drug 'Rip-Off' Death

VANCOUVER (CP) — Linda Jensen, 21, found murdered Saturday south of Squamish, was the girlfriend of a man shot to death in Stanley Park last Tuesday and probably was killed the same day, police say.

Miss Jensen, a known heroin addict and prostitute, had her head bashed in with a 25-pound rock on a snow-covered road three miles east of Britannia Beach, police said.

Her killing, and that of Philip Zinchuk, 23, with whom she had been living, were described by police as "drug-oriented" and part of a "rip-off war" amongst members of Vancouver's drug-addict population.

The local situation is so bad, police said Sunday, many addicts are living in terror and are afraid to tell anyone what is going on. They said Strongarm addicts are holding up weaker addicts for their drug supplies.

completely overwhelmed. I thought we might get a few hundred dollars more but never anything like this.

"My investment in dollars was returned four times over — but my investment in faith was increased a thousand-fold."

Hodder based his scheme on a Biblical parable in which a property owner distributed goods to his servants to invest in his absence, then returned to berate a man who let the money sit idle.

"But nobody had to be berated in my case," Hodder said. "Everyone co-operated wonderfully."

Using a bank loan — for which he pledged faith as collateral — Hodder had given $5 to each of 600 members of the congregation.

Women used the money to buy baking ingredients, then sold homemade cookies door-to-door. Other members gave gourmet dinner parties, organized dances or did handyman chores.

A doctor sold an oil painting. A private pilot took friends on sightseeing tours over Toronto, charging them a nominal fee for the flight.

Now the church will hold its annual meeting next week to decide what to do with the $9,000 profit after Hodder repays the $3,000 loan.

"Just think how my credit rating is going to shoot up when I pay the bank back so promptly," Hodder said. "It's a scheme many other churches could well copy."

He Reaped What He Sowed—Fourfold

TORONTO (UPI) — When Rev. Ben Hodder handed out $3,000 to his congregation to invest for the church for 60 days, he wasn't expecting a minor bonanza.

But he got it.

Members returned Sunday and quietly placed nearly $12,000 in a basket at the foot of a cross near the altar.

"It's just fantastic," Hodder, 57, of Key Beach United Church, said today. "I'm

OPEC Pact Reached

Times News Services — The world's major oil exporting countries are framing a proposal for Algeria which they hope will stabilize the world economy during the next five years.

Their plan, details of which have yet to be worked out, is to freeze oil prices in real terms by pegging them to an index of world inflation.

The proposal won widespread support at the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries Conference which ended here Sunday, sources said.

The OPEC nations also agreed Sunday to participate in an international conference on world economic problems, which they said present "A growing threat to world peace and stability."

The ministers of foreign affairs, petroleum and finance of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries specified in a communique, however, that such conference would have to discuss all "problems of raw materials and development."

The agreement sets the stage for a possible confrontation between the West and the Third World with its rejection of a U.S. call to limit the talks to the producing nations and the industrial powers.

The OPEC states said the world economic crisis "constitutes a growing threat to world peace and stability."

But the communique condemned "the propaganda campaign placing on OPEC's member countries the responsibility for this crisis as well as threats directed at these countries which create confusion and lead to confrontation."

The communique said the chiefs of state of the 13 OPEC nations will hold their first summit meeting between Feb. 21 and March 8 in Algiers to thrash out their position.

Reports from Paris said a preliminary world conference might be held in late March to draw up the agenda for full session expected in June or July.

NEW QUAKE FAULT IN CALIFORNIA

BRAWLEY, Calif. (UPI) — A new earthquake fault stretching for seven miles between here and the community of Westmoreland, just above the U.S.-Mexico border, may be the cause of some 40 or more tremors that shook the Imperial Valley this weekend.

Approximately 35 tremors rattled residents since Thursday, some measuring as high as 4.7 on the Richter scale. They were followed by 13 more within a 12-hour period after midnight Saturday. One of the tremors was so strong that it shattered most of the windows in the downtown area, a police dispatcher said.

Brawley officials have placed 100 city employees on standby and have established a communication system in case a major quake hits the area.

Ottawa Revamps Pacific Rim Plan

The federal government has revamped its plans for the Pacific Rim National Park on the west coast of Vancouver Island, and intends to take in other tracts of land in order to preserve the coastline, including the 55-mile life-saving trail between Bamfield and Port Renfrew.

The seashore strip will vary from one half to one-and-a-half miles in width and includes several rivers important to fisheries. In 1970 the province agreed to include the wilderness coast in the federal park but definition of boundaries was delayed to remove the land from the jurisdiction of the B.C. Forest Service.

Included in the area are the Tsusiat, Hobbitan and Squasicum lakes — the last unlogged low-level lakes on the southern half of Vancouver Island.

19 Hurt By IRA Bombs

BELFAST (UPI) — The Irish Republican Army bombed stores and cafes in Britain and Northern Ireland today in a blitz that wounded at least 19 persons and caused heavy damage.

Eighteen persons were hurt in the British city of Manchester, where a bomb shattered the basement of one of the city's leading department stores. One person was injured in Londonderry, where three bombs exploded in quick succession.

Police in both cities ordered the evacuation of other downtown stores and began searching for more explosives. Anonymous callers had tipped them to the earlier bombs in time to prevent more serious casualties, they said.

The New North America —An Answer for Canada

While you've been out playing and having fun I have been sitting here, brooding over ways to prevent ourselves from being wiped-out by the United States of America. Somebody has to worry about these things.

There now seems little doubt that we Canadians are on a collision course with the U.S.A. I expect that the moment of truth will come within the next 50 years though it could well come a whole lot sooner.

One way or the other, voluntarily, on our part, or militarily, on their's, we're going to have to give up what passes as our sovereignty. The Scott Plan may not be the perfect solution. At least it will guarantee us against annihilation.

It's now evident that (1) the United States one day is going to run out of those natural resources that keep a nation going and (2) when they do they'll take any means they have to stay alive, including war.

Let's be very orderly about this and take (1) first. The United States now sees the day when it will simply seize up through the over-use or lack of self-sufficiency of those riches we possess in abundance. More and more they are looking northward for hydro-electric power, for water, timber, minerals, petroleum in its various forms, grains, even land.

Quite apart from the threat of running out of the raw-materials that keep the world's most industrialized giant in business there is the equally dreaded prospect of running out of living room.

Over-population is, in fact, the subject of a prophetic new novel by John Hersey called "My Petition For More Space" in which he quotes Saul Bellow: "We are crowded in, packed in, now, and human beings must feel that there is a way out, and that the intellectual power and skill of their own species opens this way."

The way out, obviously, is to harness the resources and open spaces of Canada. The power, obviously, is the mighty, fearsome power of the United States.

We ought to know by now that the United States will use almost any means to maintain that might.

We've seen the evidence that Henry Kissinger, the U.S. Secretary of State, master-minded the coup that brought down the democratic structure of Chile for no other apparent reason but the assumption that the U.S.A. has a God-given right to wipe out any government it doesn't like.

Kissinger is now on the record that the U.S. will use "force" against the Arab nations if the Arabs retail their oil — their oil — in any way that seriously inconveniences the U.S. President Ford wasted no time in shaking his fist in support.

We've seen how this works on a small local scale within the last couple of weeks. When Premier Dave Barrett proposed that we increase our price of natural gas sold in the U.S. it was only a matter of hours until two of the nation's most powerful senators had blown the whistle for Kissinger, the hatchet man, to get cracking.

Force, in the military sense, has always been a second choice for the U.S. in its dealings with Canada. Retaliation, so far, has been the front-line weapon. We know only too well that the U.S. can cripple us hopelessly by punitive embargoes and tariffs in return for any slight wound we may inflict upon them in our own self-interest. The crisis in the British Columbia lumber industry, for example, is entirely a reflection of U.S. conditions.

The problem is further complicated by a growing nationalism within Canada. True, our federal government gives it little except lip service, but there's obviously a burgeoning appetite for complete independence, specifically in the limiting of U.S. ownership of our resources, now said to be a proprietorship as high as two-thirds.

As that is nibbled away, as we increasingly look to conservation and maximum prices for our exports of natural resources, so there will be a growing antagonism in the U.S. In effect, we are the Arabs of the future. If economic relations aren't the answer, force may be the ultimate, inevitable solution.

Given these bare facts the only way out seems to be the old philosophy that if you can't beat 'em, join 'em. Those few people who advocate that Canada join the U.S. are instantly shot down by the Canadian variety that we're a different breed and that we can, in time, function with true independence. Nothing could be further from the truth. We are hopelessly, completely American, more legitimately, there's a strong feeling that if the United States covered all of this continent (except Mexico and the Central Americas) its imperialist, expansionist goals would be a greater menace to the peace of the world.

Yet one has only to look at a map of North America to realize that the real problem is entirely geographic and this is how the Scott Plan evolved. The problem simply is that North America is divided horizontally when it ought to be divided vertically.

Let's assume, for example, that we created two Americas — West American and East American. We might do this by an arbitrary north-south line that would follow the eastern Manitoba border and then follow a line south through Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas and Louisiana to the Gulf of Mexico. These would be two distinct nations in which Canadians and Americans alike could take their choice.

Each nation would have everything required for economic success, each with a coast-line of excellent ports, each with a tremendous industrial complex, a huge consumer market, a diversity of semi-tropical and Arctic weather, a vast hinterland of great natural resources and available land — in short all of the components of a modern society that would make any confrontation in the future an impossibility.

The Canadian, of course, being largely ignorant of his similarities with the American, might balk at this concept because of his dreams of independence, but at least he would have minority rights which will not exist if the U.S.A. decides, as it eventually will, to gobble up its northern neighbor.

On reflection, I'm sure, even those of us with such foolish, nationalistic feelings will see that this is the only solution. It should bother no one and certainly will not bother me. I'll be living in a quiet cottage in Cornwall, England, if it ever happens.

The Williams family, with 'their' home and car in Sidney

These Two Families Never Met —But Exchanged Homes, Jobs On Opposite Sides of Pacific

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Trevor Williams and Chris Harker passed each other somewhere over the Pacific a month ago, and since then have been living in each other's shoes.

Williams, the Australian, is now teaching Harker's English and social studies classes at Parkland secondary school in Sidney.

Harker, the Canadian, is teaching Williams' classes in a high school in Echuca, a small city of 8,000 on the border of New South Wales and Victoria states in Australia.

Williams is living in Harker's home at 2524 Roseberry and driving his Land Rover.

Harker is living in Williams' home and driving his Hillman.

They have never met each other.

They are participants in a new teacher exchange program initiated by the state of Victoria that has sent 36 Australian teachers abroad for a year to Canada and the United States.

Three have come to the Victoria area — Williams to Parkland, Geoff Hinde to Belmont-Fisher secondary, and Max Kent to Mt. Newton junior secondary school.

All will stay until next January, when they and their Canadian counterparts will switch places again.

Williams' first reaction to his new home and job is good, except for the flu that struck him shortly after arriving on Dec. 27.

He, his wife Lorraine and three sons were delighted to see their first snow, and are impressed with B.C. forests and the view of the Olympics.

And they're gradually getting used to driving on the right side of the road.

One thing Williams and Harker do retain is their own salaries, but the Williams are managing even though they find the cost of living higher here than back home.

They've noticed high beef prices and the astronomical price of sugar in particular.

But many of the things Williams sees and hears in Canada are similar to life in Australia.

"I don't feel that I'm in a foreign country," he said.

All the issues of inflation, recession, unemployment, aboriginal rights, American investment in resource industries are as alive in Australia as they are in Canada, he said.

Inflation in Australia has jumped from 3 per cent a year to 16 per cent in the past two years, he said.

Unemployment is at 2 per cent, which for Australia is very high.

The Williams' oldest son, five-year-old Philip, would normally be starting school in February in Echuca, but will have to wait here till September.

However, he'll get a lot out of being in Canada for a year, his father said.

Exchange teaching has been going on for many years, and each year usually brings a few teachers from Commonwealth countries to Victoria.

Besides the three Australians, two British teachers have been at Belmont-Fisher secondary since September. Pat Findlayson is teaching social studies, John Adams-Lewis teaching shops.

Exchange teachers and Victoria teachers who have been on exchange can join the local exchange teachers' club, which holds social functions each month.

Former Athlete Ernie Peden Dead at 65

Former Victoria athlete and businessman Ernest Edward (Ernie) Peden died Sunday at the age of 65 in Royal Jubilee Hospital after a long illness.

A professional agrologist, Peden was president of the family firm of Scott and Peden Ltd., a pioneer Victoria feed and grain firm, for nearly 20 years until his retirement and sale of the company in 1967.

Born in Victoria, he graduated from the University of British Columbia with a masters degree in agriculture, and was a member of Sigma Tau Upsilon fraternity.

Captain and centre of the varsity football team during his senior year at UBC, Peden also won trophies in swimming, diving, gymnastics, bicycle racing and golf.

He placed second in breaststroke swimming and third in diving in national trials held to select the Canadian swimming and diving team for the 1932 Olympic Games and was chosen for the team.

However, he chose marriage over participation in the games at Los Angeles.

Four years later he competed for a berth on Canada's Olympic cycling team.

An enthusiastic outdoorsman until recent years, Peden was a past president of Uplands Golf Club and the Victoria Downtown Business Association, and a member of Oak Bay Kiwanis and Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

He served a term as president of the Canadian Feed

PEDEN

Manufacturers' Association and was a long-time member of the Agricultural Institute of Canada.

Peden is survived by his wife Bernice, at the family home on Cadboro Bay Road; his mother, Mrs. Hugh Tyrrell of Victoria; his daughter Valerie Burgess of Nelson; sons Alex of Victoria and Donald of Saskatoon; sisters Eleanor of Sidney and Anna of Lacey Smith; and brothers William (Torrey) of Northbrook, Ill. and Douglas of Victoria.

Funeral will be Thursday at 4 p.m. in McCall Bros. chapel, 1400 Vancouver St., Rev. William Van Druen officiating.

Anne-Marie Wiart's drawings have a delicate, ethereal kind of charm, like half-remembered illustrations from The Water Babies.

The 24-year-old French citizen has that kind of ambition, to become a specialist in illustrating books for children.

But making a living as an illustrator "seems to be hard over here. I hope it will be possible because I like Victoria."

She speaks with Far Eastern gentleness, and is too modest to call herself an illustrator, insisting she is still learning her skill despite her training in France including a final year of study in Paris.

Anne-Marie has done some TV commercial cartoon work, for Canwest in Vancouver and Crawley Films in Ottawa, and some of the TV film cartoon feature, Wait Until Your Father Comes Home.

At present she is completing a series of page-size watercolor or line drawings for a collection of stories having religious themes for children and adults.

The book by Nelson Miller includes Christian and Buddhist sources and will be published in Vancouver for Banyan Book Store.

Anne-Marie's work as an illustrator began about a year ago, and if she has a goal — she had to consider the question for a moment when asked — "it is to perfect my drawings. That may not be practical, but I want to be a specialist in book illustration. I could be happy doing children's books, but not exclusively."

Resident of Canada since December, 1970, Anne-Marie wants to become a citizen. This country, she said, is young and promises more than France. "It needs young temperaments, has more resources and younger people with a more open approach (bound by) fewer traditions."

"In Paris there is so much competition you would have to compromise your ideals, and I think in this country I would have more chance and more peace."

She has gone home to her parents each year since landing in Canada, which was to have been only a Christmas visit, and she does miss the art atmosphere of Paris, with its Louvre and hundreds of smaller galleries.

Some so-called paintings she has seen hung in Canadian galleries she agrees are fraudulent: like the rectangle evenly divided horizontally into red and white halves, which she saw in Ontario. Thus far she has not had an opportunity to study local galleries.

Anne-Marie said she is still trying to find her own style and does not quarrel with the suggestion that it lies somewhere between realism and impressionism.

"I've been told my lines are very feminine in style, lacking boldness or energy of temperament. . . . It seems people are fed up with the aggressive style."

Her reserved approach to art is perhaps a reflection of a quiet, cheerful and friendly personality.

Although raised from the age of five in France, Anne-Marie was born in Hongay, Indochina, before it became North Vietnam. Her mother is Vietnamese and Anne-Marie has the attractive olive skin and jet black hair of the Orient. A sister Jacqueline, one year younger, also lives in Victoria, the wife of a Toronto carpenter working at Open Space.

Their father was an adventurer who left France for the colony shortly after his release from a German prison camp at the end of the Second World War. After the fall of the French regime in Indochina at the Battle of Dien Bien Phu, the Wiarts made their home in Tours.

Jacklin Sidewalk Urged for Safety

Provincial highway safety engineer Jack Lisman has recommended a sidewalk be built on Jacklin Road to make it safer for pedestrians.

But Lisman and other highway department officials confirmed today the provincial government does not usually build sidewalks in unorganized areas.

Municipal or other local governments are usually responsible for building curbs and sidewalks, said the official, and Lisman's recommendation will therefore probably be passed on to the Capital Regional District.

Lisman said he initially recommended repainting the crosswalk near Belmont-

Fisher high school and placement of a new sign indicating the school zone.

Once those minor details have been attended to, he said, a new sidewalk must be built to ensure the safety of students walking to and from school.

Lisman prepared the report, which is now in the hands of Highways Minister Graham Lea, after the department received complaints from students and school officials about safety hazards on Jacklin.

Two students were struck by cars on the road this fall, after which Belmont-Fisher students launched a public campaign to get sidewalks along the road.

NEW APPROACH TO OLD PROBLEM

City Dentists to Fill Gap in Charlottes

When the first of our dental clinics on the Queen Charlotte Islands opens this spring, it will be manned by dentists from Victoria.

It's a new approach to an old problem — providing health service in isolated areas — which has the free-enterprising dentists, the socialist provincial government and the people on the islands pulling together.

When a young dentist sets up practice in a remote spot like the Queen Charlottes, there's joy at the time but problems on the way, as Dr. Robert Hicks, president of the B.C. College of Dental Surgeons, explains it.

The lonely community welcomes the dentist and there's plenty of work to do. But equipping an office, always an expensive business, is even more so in the outback of the province.

And comes the time when the dentist wants to move on, as most of them do, there are two problems: a moral obligation felt by most dentists to find a replacement and the economic problem of recovering his investment.

Problems like these have discouraged dentists (and doctors too) from working far from the major communities and so there has been a traditional shortage of professional health care.

The shortage was compounded last October when dentist Robert Orr overthrown the candy counters at Massett in the Queen Charlottes to protest the effects of candy on children's teeth.

The dentist, who was subsequently fined $12 and has since quit his practice to write a book on nutrition and preventative dentistry, pinpointed the discouragement with problems of dentistry in the hinterland.

The Queen Charlotte Islands, about 250 miles off the northern tip of Vancouver Island, have a population of about 5,600, in 15 settlements ranging from 1,500 to 50 people. About a quarter of the population is Haida Indians, most of them in two villages, Haida (Old Massett) and Skidegate.

A Department of National Defence station at Massett has about 800 servicemen and dependents. At the moment the only resident dentist is attached to that base.

The health and human resources council now organized on the Queen Charlottes is funded by the provincial government but made up of local residents, explains its co-ordinator, Jonathan Howland.

It wants to set up four community health centres and eventually have dental clinics as a part of each. So last June the council got in touch with the dental college, the organization representing B.C.'s 1,200 dentists.

The college set up a two-man committee, Victoria dentists James Martin and W. D. McDougall, and Martin said that in their survey of needs in isolated areas the problem on the Queen Charlottes stood out. Both dentists have visited and worked on the Charlottes several times in recent months.

Howland says the dentists have shown a lot of energy, initiative and sincerity in tackling the problem.

But it's been a co-operative effort, says Vicki Sexsmith, the council's chairperson and a representative from Massett. Local people will help amortize equipping costs and there have been pledges from the band councils, for example.

Hicks said the college is guaranteeing the remaining money needed to get the dental clinics started, providing the initial staffing with a rotating series of dentist volunteers and is ready to take on the task in future of finding replacements when a dentist who has set up practice there wants to move on.

That sort of help shifts the burdens which have hampered dentists in the past from settling in places like the Queen Charlottes. The college hopes it will create a eliminate eventually attracting dentists to the traditional private practice.

Meanwhile, about 50 dentists in lower Vancouver Island have signed up to man the first clinic at Massett in turn, probably two weeks at a time, said Martin. Specialists have indicated they are willing to take a turn too.

Massett's dental clinic is likely to open for business in March.

Soviets Top Arms Spending

WASHINGTON (WP) — The nations of the world spent nearly a quarter of a trillion dollars on defence in 1973, with the Soviet Union leading the list and spending an estimated 10 per cent more on armaments than the United States.

The statistics — covering 136 countries — were published in the seventh annual report of the State Department's Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. The agency issues the reports to help "in focusing attention on the problems and possibilities of reducing global military expenditures and limiting world-wide arms transfers," according to ACDA director Fred Ikle.

Though the statistics are always about a year old, the agency's survey of 1973 spending calls attention to three important trends which clearly were accelerated in 1974.

The study notes that the international arms trade doubled in 1973 to $8.7 billion annually.

It was roughly $4.4 billion 10 years ago.

That trend increased in 1974 as U.S., French, British and Soviet arms continue to pour into the Middle East and Persian Gulf regions in unprecedented quantities.

The survey also notes that the appetite for weapons in the so-called developing countries is steadily growing.

The report indicates that the growth rate of both military expenditures and armed forces in these countries is now higher than the rate in developed nations.

Similarly, the share of gross national product in these developing nations is beginning to approach that of the developed countries, according to the State Department assessment.

If there is any hint of optimism about the statistics in the report, it is in the assessment that the overall growth rate of real world military expenditures "has apparently decelerated" somewhat.

CUPE Strike Slows City Down

Services normally provided to Victoria taxpayers were either eliminated or drastically cut back to a skeletal level today as a strike by the city's 280 outside employees — members of Local 50 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees — began at 7 a.m.

Picket lines outside City Hall were honored by members of CUPE Local 388, representing about 200 clerical, technical, engineering and inspection staff. That left only 35 non-union staff, including department heads and their assistants, to try to carry on the job of running the city's operations.

Immediate impact of the walk-out was felt by hundreds of commuting motorists, caught in a traffic snarl as they found their route barred by the Johnson Street Bridge left in the "up" position.

But probably the most widespread effect of the shutdown of many services will be the absence of garbage collection. There will be no pick-up service for households, and the city's contingency plans call on residents to do the job themselves by taking their garbage to a temporary depot at the heliport located off Esquimalt Road, overlooking the Inner Harbor.

The city has stockpiled 75,000 plastic garbage bags and these will be available free of charge at City Hall.

A major source of worry to the city administration is the possibility that fuel supplies may be cut off to the heating plant in City Hall, which also serves the McPherson Playhouse, the senior citizens' activity centre, the provincial courts — police station complex (including jail cells) and the stores on the opposite side of Centennial Square.

Only one filling outlet on Pandora serves the system, and CUPE spokesman Jim Walker indicated today that the installation will be picketed and he expects the suppliers, Chevron, to honor the pickets. Otherwise the company itself would be picketed, he added.

Usually there are two oil deliveries a week. An official said there is normally only enough fuel for about three days' use, but that could be stretched to a week if thermostats are turned down.

Walker said there was another fuel implication which could affect users of domestic gas. If a train hauling propane tanks to the Hydro gas works crosses Johnson Street bridge, it will be declared hot, he said.

To help conserve supplies, a Silver Threads spokesman said the centre will close its afternoon sessions one hour earlier — at 3:30 p.m. instead of 4:30 — and cancel all its evening programs until further notice.

A picket line went up on the Douglas Street end of city hall, along Pandora between Douglas and Government, and from Douglas to the west boundary of the police station along Fisgard.

The line extended across the front entrances of the police station and adjoining Provincial Court and was respected by inside staff workers. Police were given passes to go through the line.

Provincial court was adjourned from regular starting time at 10 a.m. to 11 while arrangements were made to have clerical work done outside the premises.

Parking commission staff respected the picket line on Fisgard, and according to a sign inside the entry to the parking building, motorists were to use a coin-operated meter.

City administrative staff had prepared a "notice to citizens of the city of Victoria," outlining the effects of the strike and measures to keep essential services going. It was hoped to give this notice immediate publicity by inserting it as a display advertisement in Victoria's two daily newspapers, but the city was told

OPEC Pact Reached

Times News Services
ALGERIA — The world's major oil exporting countries are framing a proposal from Algeria which they hope will stabilize the world economy during the next five years.

Their plan, details of which have yet to be worked out, is to freeze oil prices in real terms by pegging them to an index of world inflation.

The proposal won widespread support at the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries Conference which ended here Sunday, sources said.

The OPEC nations also agreed Sunday to participate in an international conference on world economic problems, which they said present "A growing threat to world peace and stability."

The ministers of foreign affairs, petroleum and finance of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries specified in a communique, however, that such conference would have to discuss all "problems of raw materials and development."

The agreement sets the stage for a possible confrontation between the West and the Third World with its rejection of a U.S. call to limit the talks to the producing nations and the industrial powers.

The OPEC states said the world economic crisis "constitutes a growing threat to world peace and stability." But the communique condemned "the propaganda campaign placing on OPEC's member countries the responsibility for this crisis as well as threats directed at these countries which create confusion and lead to confrontation."

The communique said the chiefs of state of the 13 OPEC nations will hold their first summit meeting between Feb. 21 and March 8 in Algiers to thrash out their position.

Reports from Paris said a preliminary world conference might be held in late March to draw up the agenda for full session expected in June or July.

NEW QUAKE FAULT IN CALIFORNIA

BRAWLEY, Calif. (UPI) — A new earthquake fault stretching for seven miles between here and the community of Westmoreland, just above the U.S.-Mexico border, may be the cause of some 40 or more tremors that shook the Imperial Valley this weekend.

Approximately 35 tremors rattled residents since Thursday, some measuring as high as 4.7 on the Richter scale. They were followed by 13 more within a 12-hour period after midnight Saturday.

One of the tremors was so strong that it shattered most of the windows in the downtown area, a police dispatcher said.

Brawley officials have placed 100 city employees on standby and have established a communication system in case a major quake hits the area.

Ottawa Revamps Pacific Rim Plan

The federal government has revamped its plans for the Pacific Rim National Park on the west coast of Vancouver Island, and intends to take in other tracts of land in order to preserve the coastline, including the 55-mile life-saving trail between Bamfield and Port Renfrew.

The seashore strip will vary from one half to one-and-a-half miles in width and includes several rivers important to fisheries.

In 1970 the province agreed to include the wilderness coast in the federal park but definition of boundaries was delayed to remove the land from the jurisdiction of the B.C. Forest Service.

Included in the area are the Tsusiat, Hobbitan and Squallum lakes — the last unlogged low-level lakes on the southern half of Vancouver Island.

19 Hurt By IRA Blasts

BELFAST (UPI) — The Irish Republican Army bombed stores and cafes in Britain and Northern Ireland today in a blitz that wounded at least 19 persons and caused heavy damage.

Eighteen persons were hurt in the British city of Manchester, where a bomb shattered the basement of one of the city's leading department stores. One person was injured in Londonderry, where three bombs exploded in quick succession.

Police in both cities ordered the evacuation of other downtown stores and began searching for more explosives. There were no injuries in an explosion which later rocked the centre of London at the southern end of Bond Street.

Stock Markets Jumping Despite Gloomy News

Times News Services

Stock market prices in London and New York surged ahead today despite the release of two reports in Washington that showed the U.S. had accumulated its largest trade deficit of this century and that productivity had dropped for the first time in the nation's history.

In London, the stock market boom which began last week turned into a wild buying spree today, with the Financial Times index putting on 22.1 points in the first hour of trading.

The rise to 239.1 was the biggest ever recorded in such a short time.

By noon, the index had slipped to 239.8.

On Friday, a record 10 per cent was added to the share index which put on 19.9 points in the day.

Today's increases added about $5.1 billion to total share values, on top of about $4.6 billion Friday.

Second Drug 'Rip-Off' Death

VANCOUVER (CP) — Linda Jensen, 21, found murdered Saturday south of Squamish, was the girlfriend of a man shot to death in Stanley Park last Tuesday and probably was killed the same day, police say.

Miss Jensen, a known

heroin addict and prostitute, had her head bashed in with a 25-pound rock on a snow-covered road three miles east of Britannia Beach, police said.

Her killing, and that of Philip Zinchuk, 23, with whom she had been living, were described by police as "drug-oriented" and part of a "rip-off war" amongst members of Vancouver's drug-addict population.

The local situation is so bad, police said Sunday, many addicts are living in terror and are afraid to tell anyone what is going on. They said strong-arm addicts are holding up weaker addicts for their drug supplies.

"But nobody had to be berated in my case," Hodder said. "Everyone co-operated wonderfully."

Using a bank loan — for which he pledged faith as collateral — Hodder had given $5 to each of 600 members of the congregation.

Women used the money to buy baking ingredients, then sold homemade cookies door-to-door. Other members gave gourmet dinner parties, organized raffish or did handyman chores.

A doctor sold an oil painting. A private pilot took friends on sightseeing tours over Toronto, charging them a nominal fee for the flight.

Now the church will hold its annual meeting next week to decide what to do with the $9,000 profit after Hodder repays the $3,000 loan.

He Reaped What He Sowed—Fourfold

TORONTO (UPI) — When Rev. Ben Hodder handed out $5.1 billion to his congregation to invest for the church for 60 days, he wasn't expecting a minor bonanza.

But he got it. Members returned Sunday and quietly placed nearly $12,000 in a basket at the foot of a cross near the altar.

"It's just fantastic," Hodder, 37, of Key Beach United Church, said today. "I'm completely overwhelmed. I thought we might get a few hundred dollars more but never anything like this."

"My investment in dollars was returned four times over — but my investment in faith was increased a thousand-fold."

Hodder based his scheme on a Biblical parable in which a property owner distributed goods to his servants to invest in his absence, then returned to berate a man who let the money sit idle.
